NRA Report Publication Is Demanded; 'Gag' Charged

Borah, Nye and Bailey Press Battle to Get It to Public.

Suspect Criticism Of Agency Is Made

Recommendation of One Code Authority's Removal Revealed.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Agitation for the publication of the Darrow board report on the administration of eight NRA codes was projected in the Senate yesterday, after word reached Capitol Hill that removal of at least one code authority for malfeasance in office had been recommended as well as a sweeping reorganization of the agency.

The report, which was filed some days ago with President Roosevelt, has been shrouded in secrecy, but is understood to criticize the NRA as an agency which has been devoted to the encouragement of monopolistic practices and big business.

Mr. Roosevelt laughingly has undertaken to minimize the importance of the report and has announced he has found it necessary to submit it to be digested by three executive agencies—the Attorney General's office, the Federal Trade Commission and the NRA, which is the agency under fire. Belief exists on Capitol Hill that this action was designed to dispose of the report.

Senators Want To See It.

Certain members of the Senate, however, regard the findings of the Darrow board as a matter vitally essential to the further activities of NRA and believe the report deserves a better end than musty files. This group is being led by Senators Borah (Republican), of Idaho; Nye (Republican), of North Dakota and Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina.

Nye and Borah are particularly worked up, because the board headed by Clarence Darrow, the Chicago lawyer, was set up to investigate whether little business was being mistreated by NRA and to silence their attacks on monopolistic angles of the recovery administration.

Borah and Nye sharply denounced the failure to make the report public, but they have not yet determined on a course of action. They are considering doing one of three things: sponsoring a resolution requesting the President to send the report to the Senate; getting together a senatorial delegation to ask him to make it public or in-

Physician Held In Girl's Death

Nearly Nude Body on Table Doctor in Next Room, Unconscious.

New York, May 10 (AP).—The almost nude body of a former Broadway girl was found today upon an operating table in the office of a Brooklyn physician, who was placed under arrest on a charge of homicide.

The woman, Mrs. Virginia Allen Ball, 21, who once played in George White's "Scandals," was found by a son of the physician.

Dr. Julius Phillips, 50 years old, was found, police said, unconscious in a bedroom adjoining the office, which is in his home. At King's County Hospital it was said he was suffering from an overdose of narcotics.

Police announced an autopsy would be held on the body of the slender, chestnut-haired woman to determine whether she died from an operation.

Ball is a theatrical booking agent.

"I wanted a baby, she didn't," officers quoted Ball as saying. That was the reason, he said, she went to Dr. Phillips' office, and also why police considered the theory of an illegal operation.

Seymour Guilty In Perjury Trial

Lincoln, Nebr., May 10 (AP).—Victor Seymour, of Lincoln, once prominent in Republican circles, was convicted today in his second trial by a Federal jury of perjury before a Senate campaign investigating committee. Sentence was deferred.

Seymour, alleged to have instigated the entry of a grocer, George W. Norris, against the Nebraska Senator of the same name, told the Senators that he had no connection with the campaign, but the Government charged he provided funds to get the grocer's name on the ballot.

War Veteran Shoots Estranged Wife, Self

Bullet Hits Button to Save Man's Life; Fires at Second Woman.

Infuriated because she refused to live with him, a war veteran shot and seriously wounded his wife yesterday morning, then attempted to kill himself, his life being saved when the bullet he intended for his body glanced from a button and wounded him only slightly in the wrist.

Mrs. Margaret Alcorn, 24, of the 600 block of North Carolina avenue southeast, is in critical condition at Casualty Hospital with a bullet wound in her abdomen, while her husband, Jack Alcorn, 43, formerly a patient at the sanitarium at Oteen, N. C., is under police guard at Gallinger Hospital.

Alcorn recently returned to Washington, and was reported seen loitering near the house where Mrs. Alcorn lived, the scene of the shooting. Yesterday he called and asked the maid if he might see his wife.

"Tell her I'm going away, and it's urgent," he said.

Alcorn waited in a vestibule in the basement. When his wife appeared in the doorway he drew a .32-caliber pistol, shot his wife twice, then turned the weapon on himself. Mrs. Alcorn screamed, and Mrs. Jennie Bloom, owner of the house, rushed to the door. A bullet whistled past her ear.

"I'll get you too," cried Alcorn, as he shot.

MRS. MARGARET ALCORN.

Neighbors called police, who took Mrs. Alcorn to the hospital. They found Alcorn sitting on the steps, holding his head.

"I shot my wife!" said he. "I shot my wife and I don't care what happens to me."

Policeman B. M. Strong and E. H. Snow arrested Alcorn, who offered no resistance.

The couple, married seven years, have a son, Raymond, 5.

D. C. Budget Is Increased By Senators

Committeemen Add Four Million to House Appropriation.

A total of $37,224,884.94 is provided in the 1935 District appropriation bill favorably reported to the Senate yesterday by its Appropriations Committee.

The amount exceeds by $4,574,227 the $32,650,657.94 carried in the bill as it passed the House, and is $2,070,041 greater than the 1935 estimates and $8,849,050.94 more than the amount provided in the appropriation act for the current fiscal year.

The increase was spread over practically all municipal activities. Public schools, public welfare and health, fire and other departments and public activities were granted larger amounts than had been provided in the House bill.

The committee set the Federal appropriation at $5,700,000, the amount appropriated for this year and recommended for next year by the Bureau of the Budget. Although there was some discussion of the general subject of fiscal relations between the Federal and District Governments, the committee made no changes. The House had cut the Federal appropriation to $4,364,295.

Conference Dispute Slated.

The amount of the Federal appropriation is expected to be a matter of dispute between House and Senate as are the many other items increased by the Senate committee.

Emergency public relief received the largest increase, $1,700,000 over the $1,300,000 carried in the House bill, bringing the total of $3,000,000.

Public schools were given increases of $1,272,221, most of which was for purchase of sites and construction of new buildings and additions. New school items written into the bill by the committee include:

Additional amounts for erection of eight-room building on site in vicinity of Logan School, $5,000; completing construction of junior high school on site at Nineteenth street and Minnesota avenue southeast, $180,000; four-room addition to Phelps School, $65,000; addition of Deal Junior High School, including Berle Asks $9,999 Salary Cut.

New York, May 10 (U.P.).—Adolph A. Berle, former Roosevelt brain truster, today asked that his $10,000 job be reduced to $1 a year. Berle, city chamberlain, suggests his job be consolidated with that of the finance department in the interest of economy.

Senate Beats FTC Control Of Exchange

Amendment to Stock Bill Loses, 51 to 29; Jones Measure Reported.

By the overwhelming vote of 51 to 29 the Senate yesterday rejected a proposal to place administration of the stock market control under the Federal Trade Commission, as provided by the House version of the securities exchange bill.

This marks the third time the Senate has rejected a major amendment to the stock market bill, and again demonstrated the general satisfaction felt with the measure as finally reported by the Banking and Currency Committee. The Senate also rejected, 47 to 22, an amendment modifying the sections dealing with registration of securities and filing of reports by corporations.

These actions came after Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial campaign committee, made the first general attack on the bill. Previous hostile speeches were aimed at specific sections. His thesis was that "you can't protect suckers" by passing laws.

In an effort to bring the bill to a final vote before the week ends, Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson obtained unanimous consent for the Senate to meet an hour earlier today and to limit debate, starting at 2 p. m., to 15 minutes on the bill and 15 minutes on any pending amendment for each Senator. It is possible the Senate will dispose of the bill today.

Earlier in the day the Senate adopted unanimously a joint resolution clothing the Federal Trade Commission with power to require corporations, whose stocks are listed on the New York Stock Exchange or the Curb Exchange, to reveal the salaries of their executive officers and directors.

The resolution was introduced after several large corporations refused to supply the trade commission with such information after adoption of the Costigan resolution at the last session of Congress requesting a list of salaries paid officers and directors by all corporations with assets in excess of $1,000,000.

As the Senate debated the stock

Tear Gas Bombs Quell Riot By Jobless; Troops Called

Witchita, Kans., May 10 (AP).—Four companies of National Guardsmen bore down upon a meeting of 400 unemployed demonstrators today and dispersed them with tear gas.

Acting under orders of Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Guardsmen had sought to prevent a recurrence of clashes Wednesday in which the demonstrators, protesting against wage scales on work-relief projects, beat and stabbed policemen.

Police took into custody 58 men and three women for questioning concerning their parts in the meeting. Other police were searching for 20 men named in warrants charging them with criminal syndicalism.

The Guardsmen were ordered into active duty just before noon to preserve order. Despite these preparations, demonstrators gathered as planned in Wichita's West Side. As they listened to a speech, the Cavalry detachment, under command of Capt. Joseph McVicar, rode on to the field, followed by the foot troops and the motorized unit.

An elderly man, bearing a United States flag, came out of the crowd and said:

"You can't fire on the American flag."

Capt. McVicar brushed him aside and announced:

"I have been commanded by the Governor of the State of Kansas to disperse this meeting."

The infantry companies then surrounded the crowd and tossed tear gas bombs.

The troops returned to their armory late today, apparently having quelled any riotous spirit.

Meanwhile, at Oklahoma City, a fire department hose company was called to the courthouse to disperse a crowd of nearly 500 unemployed who attempted to storm the office of R. V. Boyer, county relief chief.

Two Kidnap Rich Oil Man From Party

William F. Gettle Is Abducted; Captors Refuse Spot Cash.

Family Offers to Deal in Secret With Police Excluded.

Arcadia, Calif., May 10 (AP).—An offer to deal directly with the kidnapers and to pay "any reasonable ransom demand" for the return of William F. Gettle, 45-year-old oil millionaire, who was kidnaped early today from his luxurious country estate here, was made by a spokesman for the family as all law-enforcement agencies in Southern California entered the case.

No ransom demand has been made yet, said Ernest E. Noon, Beverly Hills lawyer, authorized to act as family spokesman because Mrs. Gettle is on the verge of collapse.

Gettle was kidnaped by two men just after a gay midnight swimming party on his recenty acquired estate.

All guests except James P. Wolf, Westwood furniture dealer, had retired to the house. Wolf and Gettle went to the recreation hall to change from their bathing clothes. Wolf tells the story from there on as follows:

"Put 'Em Up, Gentlemen."

Footsteps were heard on the walk outside and a soft voice said: "Put 'em up, gentlemen."

Looking up, Gettle and Wolf saw two young men, masked with handkerchiefs and armed with pistols. Apparently they were Americans.

The gunmen ordered Gettle and Wolf to continue their conversation as they marched them past the swimming pool to the east wall of the estate, 100 yards away. Wolf thought it was a holdup and tossed his purse into the shrubbery nearby. The gunmen said nothing until the 7-foot stone wall, surmounted by barbed wire, was reached.

Then one of the masked men announced:

"This is not a heist (holdup)—it is a snatch!"

Gettle pleaded vainly. "I will give you all the money I have on me, and go into the house for more if that isn't enough."

The kidnapers laughed.

"That won't be enough," they said. "This is a kidnaping, fellow."

Against the wall was a stepladder, one which had been seen on the grounds several days before. Caretakers thought it belonged there. The gunmen took Wolf's and Gettle's neckties and bound their hands, then strengthened the bonds with adhesive tape. Both were gagged and hobbled.

They tied Wolf to a tree and carried Gettle, who weighs about 200 pounds, up the stepladder and dropped him over the wall. Wolf heard him groan as he hit the ground on the other side.

"Don't be so soft," admonished one of the kidnapers as he jumped from the top of the wall to the other side. The other turned to Wolf and said:

Warned Not to Move.

"Stay where you are for an hour or we'll kill you. This is no stick-up. It's a kidnaping."

The second gunman dropped over the wall and Wolf heard an automobile start and move away.

Desperately the furniture dealer struggled with his bonds and finally freed himself. Half an hour later he appeared at the house, the tape still holding his mouth shut, and after the tape was removed told what had happened.

Officers also suspected that the gang was made up of many members besides the two who seized

Dollfuss Escapes Infernal Machine

Bomb Is Found at Airport Before His Arrival.

Salzburg, Austria, May 10 (AP). Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss' luck in escaping assassins served him well today as a powerful infernal machine was discovered in the airport station shortly before Dollfuss arrived from Vienna.

The Little Chancellor, who came here to attend a patriotic front meeting, did not appear greatly worried when informed.

Long-Lost Needle Taken From Arm

Believed Swallowed Many Years Ago by Woman.

Hagerstown, Md., May 10 (Spl.).—For several days Mrs. Kate Fechtig, 82 years old, suffered with a sharp pain in one of her arms. It was feared by her family that it was due to a heart ailment, and she was treated for such.

Yesterday a large lump raised upon the arm and a sharp point made its appearance. When removed it was found to be a needle, black with age, which Mrs. Fechtig is believed to have swallowed many years ago. The aged woman is much improved today.

8 Are Hurt As Bolt Hits Trolley Car

Dense Smoke Adds to Terror as Doors Fail to Open.

Eight persons were injured early last evening as they battered their way out of a smoke-filled street car, after it was struck by lightning on Georgia avenue between Gallatin and Hamilton streets northwest.

None of those injured was in a serious condition, although two received hospital treatment. Others were treated at the scene by the Fire Rescue Squad and neighborhood physicians.

Panic seized the carful of passengers as lightning struck a tree and jumped to the car itself. Clouds of thick smoke rolled up through the floor before the echoes of the crash had died away. The passengers rushed for the doors, which refused to open. Frightened men kicked and beat the windows and the bars which covered them as those inside milled in the smoke.

Motorman Thinks Fast.

Joseph A. Phelps, of Hyattsville, Md., the motorman, broke out the front windows of the center-door car and climbed out. He saw the vehicle was slowly drifting backward down Georgia avenue. Billows of smoke were gushing from the front window. Phelps ran to the back of the car, pried open another window, and set the hand brake.

Those injured were Conductor Charles L. McDonald, 31, of 1219 Shepherd street northwest, slight burns; Private Richard Carlson, U. S. A., 21 years old, treated at Walter Reed Hospital for cuts on right hand; Edna Henley, 30, of 7499 Blair road northwest, leg bruised; William C. Appleby, 45, of Silver Spring, Md., treated at Garfield Hospital for cuts on hand and leg bruises.

Edward B. Blade, 54, of 516 Fern street northwest, arm bruises; Lena Myers, 30, of 1368 Sheridan street northwest, finger cuts and leg bruises; Anna W. Capply, 38, of 3016 Illinois avenue northwest, leg bruises, and Thomas Taylor, 45, of Silver Spring, Md., arm bruises.

Witness Tells of Mishap.

J. R. Amity, of 612 Park road northwest, said he was standing on the street when he heard the crash and saw people running toward the car. He followed them and saw lightning still dancing along the roof of the vehicle. The passengers could only be seen dimly through the smoke, he said, and some of them were squirming out of windows and one man was kicking savagely at the bars.

Lightning struck the car at 5:18, in the midst of a driving rain storm, with all the windows closed. Traffic on the line was tied up for 25 minutes, until the disabled car could be towed to the barn. Its motors were burned out.

Traction officials said yesterday's mishap was the first of its kind in many years.

(Associated Press.)

This goes side by side with the story of the man biting the dog.

There's a resident of Suiter, Bland County, Va., who wishes to resign his Federal job and, if he's not permitted to resign, he wishes the job abolished.

S. J. Breeding is Suiter's Democratic postmaster. He wrote Senator Byrd that he had been trying to resign for some time and nothing had been done about it. He implored Mr. Byrd to use his influence toward having the fourth-class postmastership done away with.

Mr. Byrd pulled the document from a stack of letters requesting jobs and said he would forward it to the Postoffice Department. It was the first such request he had received, he said.

9-Year-Old Girl Dies In Attempt at Rescue

Providence, R. I., May 10 (AP).—Unselfish unto death to her family, 9-year-old Frances Genevieve Moore perished today in a fire that destroyed an isolated Moore farmhouse and took the lives of her father, Phillip Moore, 33, and her sister, Phyllis, 7.

Despite screams of her mother, who tried to persuade her not to attempt it, Frances Genevieve rushed into the flaming house to rescue her father and sister, only to die with them.

Los Angeles, May 10 (AP).—Louis Tomai, automobile racing driver, was sentenced today to six months in jail for assault upon a newspaper photographer and a reporter at the funeral of a racing victim, Ernie Triplett. Elbert "Babe" Stapp was fined $100.

The drivers pleaded guilty to simple assault on John Bennus, photographer, and James Lee, reporter, of a Los Angeles newspaper which had been conducting a campaign against race track fatalities.

Debt Situation Snarled; Europe Now Hesitates Over Offering Tokens

Huge Wheat Loss Due To Midwest Drought

Central States Under Blanket of Dust; Two Lives Lost.

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—Heavy clouds carrying thousands of tons of dust scooped up from drought-harried fields of the Midwest plunged several States into semi-darkness today.

Airplane schedules were disrupted.

In Chicago skyscrapers became only hazy, unnatural appearing shapes to observers a block away. Dust seeped through windows of offices and homes, covering desks and papers and undoing the spring housecleaning of a million housewives.

At least two deaths were attributed to the high winds, which spread the dust from the Dakotas to Lake Michigan. At Sykeston, N. Dak., Mrs. John Bofencamp, 42, a farm woman, suffocated when she was pinned under a chicken coop blown over her. Near Dupres, S.

Costs Million Bushels Daily, but Wallace Sees no Famine.

One million bushels of wheat have been ruined every day for a month by the record-smashing drought now gripping the Middle West, Secretary Wallace declared yesterday.

He emphasized, however, that America is in no danger of going hungry because a surplus of 260,000,000 bushels remaining from other crops is tucked away in bulging elevators and farm bins throughout the sun-baked reaches of the grain belt.

Even though harrassed farmers watched helplessly while hot prairie winds whirled seed wheat out of the dust in which it was planted, it was considered likely that a surplus of 45,000,000 bushels would result from this year's crop.

Agriculture Department estimates placed the winter wheat crop at 461,471,000 bushels, or 30,000,-

Application of Johnson Act Still Obscure as to Default.

Finland Only One Settling in Full

Wholesale Reneging on $174,000,000 Due on June 15 Feared.

By Leon Dure, jr.

The greatest confusion still prevailed last night over the troubled war debt situation, with no official explanation of the application of the Johnson act forthcoming from either the State Department or the White House.

Undenied reports that foreign representatives are being told by the State Department that token payments June 15 will not save them from the onus of "defaulters" apparently threatened wholesale reneging of the approximate $174,000,000 due at that time.

President Roosevelt will have opportunity at his press conference today to clear up a situation that has become increasingly complex. Until he does speak out, however, the most authoritative indication of this Government's attitude appeared to be reports that the Johnson act will apply.

Tokens Lose Meaning.

Unless this position is altered, token payments will lose their meaning, observers believed, and there would be little incentive for foreign countries to pay even part of their pending installments. Except for Finland, which will pay $116,538, none of the 13 debtor nations has evidenced any desire to settle in full.

Envoys of Italy and Czechoslovakia yesterday followed those of France and Belgium the day before, in calling at the State Department for information. They are said to have been told they could not be guaranteed against provisions of the Johnson act, which shuts off American credit to foreign defaulters, even if token payments should be offered.

Such payments would be welcomed by this Government, it is understood, but the State Department is said to have informed the diplomats that the Johnson act would classify such nations along with out-and-out defaulters, notably France. If this is followed through, apparently little choice would be left the debtors except to pay in full or suffer consequences.

Cumming's Opinion Loophole.

A different impression was created by Mr. Roosevelt's remarks Wednesday, to the effect that each case would be judged on its own merits. Taken with former statements of

Dr. Dickinson Flays Critics Of Dr. Thorp

Hints He May Resign if Commerce Bureau Post Is Denied.

A caustic statement in which he hints he may resign in protest against "malicious" charges which he said blocked Senate confirmation of Dr. Willard Thorp as director of the Department of Commerce Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce was issued last night by Assistant Secretary of Commerce John Dickinson.

Dr. Dickinson, in attacking the circumstances which led President Roosevelt to withdraw Thorp's nomination, declared:

"Pending the determination of whether or not it will be possible to secure acceptance of the directorship of the bureau by a man of Dr. Thorp's caliber and his confirmation at the hands of the Senate, I reserve consideration of my future relation to the department."

The Assistant Secretary brought the entire incident out into the open by accusing a clique of "disappointed office seekers" with hurling "untruthful charges of a miserable, petty, partisan character" against Thorp.

Thorp Defended.

Dr. Dickinson defended Dr. Thorp as a highly competent business analyst and replied to "grapevine" claims that Dr. Thorp is a Republican by saying unless a man of the same caliber of Thorp would accept the directorship the bureau would be "surrendered to patronage mongering in its pettiest and most contemptible form."

Observers believed the former University of Pennsylvania professor's statement might draw prompt action by the White House. The President, however, has failed to comment since he recalled Dr. Thorp's name from the Senate. Dr. Thorp formerly held a chair of economics at Amhert College. Dr. Dickinson came into office under the banner of Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California.

Dr. Dickinson's statement follows in full:

House Sends New Air Mail Bill to Senate

Substitute Measure Calls for Determination of National Policy.

By Robert C. Albright.

After an old-fashioned political floor brawl over air-mail contract cancellations, the House yesterday completely revamped the Senate's air-mail legislation, authorized one-year contracts by the Postmaster General and called for determination of a National air-mail policy.

By a voice vote, the chamber approved a complete House substitute for the Senate air-mail bill, then sent the measure back to the Senate, where a conference will be demanded.

The approved House measure, for which members claim a $10,000,000 annual saving, would set up a special commission of five members to survey all phases of civil, military and naval aviation, then recommend a National policy to Congress.

Fish Attacks Farley.

The bill continues in force present air-mail postage rates until July 1, when a new rate of 5 cents an ounce would become operative. For carrying the mails, the Postoffice Department may pay up to 35 cents a mile for 300-pound loads, plus one-tenth additional for each 100 pounds, a slash under the old 44-cent rate.

Loudly, Postmaster General James A. Farley was assailed and defended for contract cancellations, with Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., New York Republican, leading the attack. Blaming Farley for "poor advice" and "misleading the President," Fish parodied Lewis Carroll's classic at some length under the title, "The Postmaster General in Blunderland."

Fish particularly deplored the death of 12 Army airmen, who, he charged, were "killed by the blunder."

Democratic members were quick to deny the bill was a "repudiation" of the Postmaster General's policy, and one, Representative D. C. Dobbins, of Illinois, "dared" commercial airlines whose contracts were canceled to sue for relief.

Managing debate on the bill, Chairman James M. Mead of the Postoffice Committee hailed a "new deal in the air mail," defended Army air-mail operation, and chal-

Suit for Gold Coin Dismissed

Plaintiff Fails in Move to Force Exchange for Certificate.

An attempt to force the Secretary of the Treasury to exchange gold coin for gold certificates was blocked yesterday in the District Supreme Court when Justice Jennings Bailey dismissed the suit of Halsey K. Davis, of New York City.

Justice Bailey ruled that Davis' only possible claim was against the United States for breach of contract and not against the Treasury Secretary. In a short opinion written in longhand, Justice Bailey declared: "The Secretary of the Treasury does not hold any specific gold coins as a special deposit in trust for the holders of a gold certificate. The plaintiff's right of action, if any, is against the United States."

Davis had asked the court to issue an order directing the Secretary of the Treasury to give him $20 in gold for a gold certificate which he held. He said he had twice presented the certificate for payment and had ben twice refused. This refusal is unconstitutional and in derogation of his rights, Davis alleged.

Assistant United States District Attorney John W. Fihelly appeared for the Government. He pointed out that Davis could not sue the Government without its consent, and argued that he could not, therefore, sue the Secretary of the Treasury without the Secretary's consent. This consent has not been obtained, he declared.

Author Bloom Tells Rep. Bloom Washington Didn't Toss Dollar

George Washington didn't throw a dollar across the Potomac nor even across the Rappahannock. Take it from Sol Bloom, it can't be done.

Representative Bloom, who was director of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission, has just published a book made up of questions and answers concerning Washington. Bloom made up his own questions and then he supplied the answers. There are hundreds of them.

But occasionally Bloom stumped himself. For instance:

"Q. What was the favorite flower of George Washington and Martha Washington?

But Bloom is positive about his answers to most of his questions. He is positive that Washington didn't soak his false teeth in port wine. Bloom says his dentist advised him the wine would stain his teeth.

"Did Washington practice dentistry on his slaves?

"Washington wrote voluminous diaries and record books and there is nothing in these to show that he practiced dentistry on his slaves or anyone else.

"Did Washington swear at Gen. Lee at the Battle of Monmouth?

"This question has been discussed for many years. To date, no authentic evidence has been produced to verify the statement that Washington swore at Gen. Lee during the Battle of Monmouth.

"Did Nellie Custis own a zither and is it still in existence?

"Gen. Washington gave a zither, which was imported from London, to Nellie Custis as a birthday gift.

Brown Favors Physical Test For Motorists

By Felix Bruner.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, yesterday enthusiastically approved the proposal that examinations for automobile drivers' permits be made stricter in an effort to cut down the rapidly mounting toll of death from automobile accidents. He also suggested that there be more frequent revocation of permits of drivers causing serious or frequent accidents.

In this, Brown agrees with William A. Van Duzer, traffic commissioner, who believes that drastic steps should be taken to cut down the number of accidents. During the first four months of this year 47 persons have been killed in traffic, as compared with 24 during the same period of last year.

Brown went even further and suggested that applicants for drivers' permits be required to submit to physical examinations and obtain certificates from physicians before being permitted to drive.

Present Not Strict.

"Physical defects of drivers cause a surprisingly large number of serious accidents," Brown said. "Under the present system, only eye examinations are given and the applicant's word is taken that he has no physical handicap that would prevent him from being a good driver.

"The examination should determine particularly whether a prospective driver is suffering from a heart disease. Many accidents have been caused by heart attacks and by persons fainting at the wheel."

The manslaughter law should be strengthened, in the opinion of the police superintendent. He pointed out that it is almost impossible to obtain a conviction on a manslaughter charge under the present law, even though the driver causing a fatal accident may fail to stop.

"Much more severe penalties, properly enforced, would go a long way toward ending reckless driving," Brown said. "More severe penalties, stricter qualifications for drivers' licenses and more frequent revocation of permits for longer periods of time should bring down the accident rate appreciably," he said.

Maj. Brown does not feel that there is any practical way to regulate pedestrian traffic in any manner similar to the regulation of automobile traffic. He pointed out that attempts have been made to force pedestrians to cross only at cross walks and only with green lights but that they have been unsuccessful, because pedestrians as a whole have been unwilling to cooperate. Yet, he pointed out, 70 per cent of persons killed in traffic accidents are pedestrians and most of those are persons crossing at points other than cross walks or crossing against the lights.

Young Drivers in Crashes.

Statistics on file at the traffic bureau throw considerable light on the cause of accidents. They show, for instance, that a very high proportion of accidents are caused by young drivers. Drivers between the ages of 18 and 24 last year were involved in 3,031 accidents in which 27 persons were killed and 3,004 hurt. This compares with 8,751 accidents in which 59 persons were killed and 8,692 were hurt, involving persons between the ages of 25 and 54.

Although records are not available showing the proportion of drivers in each age group, it is obvious that the proportion of drivers in the second group is much higher as compared with the first than is the proportion of accidents.

The problem of street lighting also is becoming involved with the traffic problem. Because of reduced appropriations, it may be necessary to reduce street lighting in Washington. Records show that more fatal accidents occur during the evening hours than in the daytime. Of the 79 fatal accidents last year, 11 occurred between the hours of 8 p. m. and 9 p. m. This is the highest fatality rate for any time of day, and most of the accidents have been caused by pedestrians stepping into dark streets.

Although fatalities are more frequent at night, there are more accidents during the rush hours of the afternoon than at any other time. However, these usually are comparatively minor in character. Serious accidents, as a rule, do not occur in heavy traffic, nor during rush hours, nor in downtown districts.

While more fenders are folded up and there are more collisions, low speed of automobiles and increased caution of drivers prevent these accidents from being serious. The more serious accidents occur in outlying districts where traffic is light and there is more temptation to speed and to drive recklessly.

On the more-traveled streets the speed limit in Washington is 22 miles an hour. This is a lower rate than in most cities, but traffic engineers contend that it is the most efficient speed at which traffic can be handled—that more cars can pass a given point in a given length of time at this speed than at any other. At a higher speed, automobiles must travel farther apart and thus the number of cars that can be handled in a traffic lane is reduced.

Speed Regulates Stops.

Traffic lights are set to accomodate traffic at this speed. Complaints about frequent stops at these lights, Van Duzer said, are caused by the fact that motorists travel at higher than the prescribed speed. A check on Sixteenth street, in the 22-mile zone, indicated that most cars were traveling nearly 30 miles an hour. In the 30-mile zone, cars were traveling at an average of 39 miles an hour.

Another interesting fact disclosed by the records is that women are involved in much fewer accidents than men. Last year men were involved in 11,463 accidents in Washington, while women were involved in only 1,089. The proportion of women drivers to men drivers is not shown but it probably is much higher than 1 to 10.

Western Drought Alarms Hopkins

As Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, told of the grave problem looming if Western areas fail to get rain soon. He was testifying before a Senate sub-committee.

Two Die as Dust Covers Midwest

Dak., Mrs. Jake Ochsner died of injuries suffered in an automobile accident which resulted when dust blinded the eyes of her husband, who was driving their car.

Transported by winds which in the upper areas reached velocities of as high as 100 miles an hour, the dust reduced visibility at the University of Chicago Weather Observatory from the normal 6 to 8 miles to less than 1 mile.

United Air Lines' pilots reported the heavy dust conditions prevailed the entire distance from Omaha to Chicago and that the dust rose more than 2 miles above sea level. Northwest Airways was forced to cancel one St. Paul-Chicago flight, but later resumed all schedules.

The swirling dust clouds shrouded Minnesota and North Dakota in what was described as the worst dust storm in their history. Newly sown grain was uncovered as the winds bore the soil hundreds of miles. Farmers were forced to abandon work.

Fields were reported blown clear of plowed soil at Grand Forks, N. Dak., where the wind has blown steadily more than 24 hours. Along Minnesota and North Dakota highways ditches were filled level with dirt.

Clouds of dust from the north created a hazy sky at Kansas City and through most of Missouri. Light rains brought a little relief to many parts of Kansas.

Wheat Losses Total 1,000,000 Bushels Daily

Drought Will Cause No Famine, However, Says Wallace.

000 fewer than predicted a month ago. Unofficial estimates showed that even if the spring crop, normally 240,000,000 bushels, would fall 65,000,000 bushels below the average, the total 1934 crop would be approximately 635,000,000 bushels.

Urges Flexible Program.

"There certainly is no immediate danger of food shortage of any kind in this country," Wallace said.

"If this drought continues," he added, "it behooves all of us to do some really serious thinking because if we should have a succession of drought years we would want to be sure that we have an agricultural program sufficiently flexible so that the farmers of the United States could not only be assured of food themselves, but also be sure of providing an adequate supply to the other people of this country who depend on them for food."

Chicago grain experts predicted $1 wheat will become a reality unless the grain-raising area of the Nation is relieved of the drought within a week.

Wheat soared 5 cents a bushel yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade, the maximum one-day rise permitted. It was the first time since October that prices bumped the top of the limit. May wheat sold at 90⅜ cents a bushel.

Affecting Relief Work.

Meanwhile, Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, told a Senate Labor sub-committee that the drought was adding serious problems to the attempt to care for the destitute.

He added that $25,000,000 had been spent in the last two months for drought relief in the Northwest. Summer, he explained, probably would see a decrease in the number of persons needing relief, but winter would swell the rolls again. The administrator indorsed the LaFollette bill to provide $10,000,000,000 more for public works.

President Roosevelt directed Hopkins to grant $600,000 to Utah for 1,000 irrigation projects. It was estimated that crops worth $3,600,000 could be saved and 10,000 families benefitted. The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill to appropriate $10,000,000 for farm credit loans to fruit growers.

The Agriculture Department said many farmers had suspended seeding of wheat to wait for rain, while others who planted in dust and saw their seed blown away abandoned hope of a harvest this season.

Other winter grains, including rye, the crop report showed, probably would have higher yields per acre this season than in previous years.

120 Days Given In 'Job Racket'

Complaint of Two Youths Leads to Sentence.

Robert M. Saur, reputed "job racket" operator, was sentenced to serve 120 days in jail by Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Police Court yesterday.

Saur was charged with obtaining money under false pretenses. It was alleged he took $25 from two colored youths with a promise of securing them positions at an Annapolis (Md.) night club.

Following complaints to police, J. O. Patton, a special investigator, arrested Saur at a downtown hotel. He is reputed to have advertised for applicants to fill bellboy positions, and to have obtained $12.50 from each for "uniforms." In passing sentence Judge Schuldt scored Saur's activities as "a vicious racket."

the millionaire. A woman was seen sitting in a car near the gate of the Gettle estate late yesterday by W. G. Lutzi, one of the guests at the party, as he was leaving the place.

Her actions, Lutzi told sheriff's deputies, aroused his suspicions, and he went over and asked her what she wanted.

She began to question him at length about the Gettle family, and about the estate, asking many personal questions.

Finally, said Lutzi, the woman seemed to sense that Lutzi was suspicious, and she tried to pass the matter off as a joke. Then she started her car and drove hurriedly away.

The Gettles have four children—Billy, 8; Betty, 6; Bobby, 5, and Jimmy, 4.

Officers said the abduction not only was the work of an organized gang, but it had been planned in advance, and that the victim probably was carried to the mountains between Pasadena and San Bernardino.

Had Guarded Children.

A conference of Federal, State, county and municipal authorities was called by District Attorney Buron Fitts with a view to launching an intensive hunt. He appealed to the citizenry of southern California to report every "suspicious movement" observed.

Walter Girtner, brother-in-law of Gettle, disclosed that the oil man had feared the possibility of one of his children being kidnaped and had kept a guard with them always. Gettle never regarded himself as possible prey for the "snatch racket," Girtner added.

Farley Urges Mother's Day Stamp Be Used

Letter Bearing It Will Be Souvenir; Should Arrive Sunday.

Use of the Postoffice Department's special postage stamp, issued in honor of the Mothers of America, on letters written in observance of Mother's Day Sunday, was advocated yesterday by Postmaster General James A. Farley.

"Inasmuch as the Postoffice Department has just issued a special postage stamp in honor of the Mothers of America," Farley said, "I feel that it is appropriate for me to suggest that every man, woman and child in this country who is blessed with a living mother observe Mother's Day, May 13, by writing their mother a special letter of appreciation and sending it in an envelope adorned by the special mother's stamp. This action on the part of sons and daughters will evidence their gratitude that God has spared their mothers to them and will provide the mothers with a real sentimental souvenir which they will be happy to place among their most treasured possessions.

"Mother's Day letters should be written so that they will arrive at their destination not later than Sunday. Those which must be transported by railway or air mail should be written not later than Friday. Where letters are written as late as Saturday, they should bear a special delivery stamp to insure delivery on Sunday."

Woman Directs Rescue Of 30 Patients in Fire

Hudson, Wis., May 10 (AP).—A woman superintendent today directed the rescue of 30 patients, some of them bedridden, as fire destroyed a sanitorium here. Five buildings weer razed with total loss estimated at $150,000.

Most of the 30 were at lunch when Mrs. Byrd Crowell, superintendent, smelled smoke and found flames on the third floor. A few of the patients, most of whom were being treated for nervous disorders, had to be forcibly removed.

Bloom Writes Book On Gen. Washington

The instrument can be seen at Mount Vernon.

"Did George Washington ever sell any slaves?

"Yes. There are records of George Washington having sold slaves, although on several occasions he wrote that he did not care to do so."

George Washington didn't write with a gold pen. Neither did he smoke cigars. Neither had been invented in his time, Bloom explains. But the Father of His Country did play billiards, was fond of dancing, and gambled, "but not for high stakes."

Another question that has Bloom stumped is that of how Washington cocked his hat. Bloom says he just doesn't know.

Bloom also discusses the question of who wrote Washington's Farewell Address. He declares this is an unsettled question, but insisted (in italics) that the idea was Washington's own.

Bloom also declares that Washington had a still on his place and manufactured whisky. "It was a reasonably profitable venture," he adds.

"What did Washington eat for breakfast?" the author asks himself, and he replies to himself:

"It is stated that Washington's usual breakfast was made up of Indian cakes, honey and tea; but this can scarcely be taken to mean more than that he was fond of these and breakfasted simply."

Washington once attended a circus, Bloom replies, finding himself curious on the subject.

Substitute Measure Sent to Senate; Conference Is Asked.

lenged members to find "any politics in this bill."

While the House debate was raging, criticism of the Army Air Corps on another front was answered by Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the corps, who struck back at the special Rogers committee report to the House, attacking Air Corps procurement methods.

Procurement by negotiation, Foulois declared, was the method always heretofore followed by himself and his predecessors. When Assistant Secretary of War Woodring ordered competitive bidding on aircraft, he said, the Air Corps cooperated loyally.

Further, he insisted, a representative of the judge advocate general's office approved the circular proposals for bids declared by the Rogers committee to be illegally drawn up by the Air Corps.

Farley Praises Army.

The Foulois statement followed one by Postmaster General Farley praising Army fliers for their services in carrying the air mail. Not a pound of mail was lost, despite bad flying weather, said the Postmaster General.

Echoing the Postmaster General's stand, Mead, taking the floor in support of his air-mail bill, attributed the Army air deaths to bad flying weather.

A dozen efforts were made to amend his measure, but only changes approved by the committee were agreed to. One cut the appropriation for the special commission's air survey from $100,000 to $75,000.

Representative Harlan (Democrat), Ohio, vainly tried to strike out a section guaranteeing the air lines' right to press claims rising out of contract annulments. His point was that they now have this privilege at law, and the provision would give credence to rumors the right has been denied them. His amendment was shouted down.

Survey Limitation Defeated.

Representative Goss (Republican), Connecticut, tried to limit the special air survey to commercial aviation, pointing out that House Naval and Military Affairs committees have already made such studies, and another has been authorized by the Secretary of War. His amendment was defeated.

Among provisions of the Senate bill ignored by the House were sections authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to determine the public necessity for all air transportation routes and "fair and reasonable" rates for air transportation of mail matter.

Further, the Senate bill permitted the Postmaster General to grant a successful bidder six months to qualify for mail services, and laid down provisions relating to holding company control, interlocking directorates, and salaries of officers of air-mail contracting companies.

Three Old Contracts Still Out.

With the Army Air Corps relinquishing more mail routes to private carriers, Representative Mead declared only three of the old contractors have not made new contracts, and that "before long all probably will be taken care of."

Under the House bill, awards by the Postmaster General are not to be final, but subject to review according to law and present procedure. He may not award contracts for routes in excess of 29,000 miles, and is prohibited from establishing schedules for air-mail transportation in excess of 40,000,000 airplane miles annually.

The Postoffice Department last night announced plans of several companies for modern de luxe equipment over their routes, many including sleeping accommodations.

Assault Verdict To Be Appealed

Former Usher Charged Man Attacked Him.

A $2,500 verdict returned in favor of David J. Brown, former usher in Keith's Theater, because of an assault upon him by George A. Garrett, manager of Clark, Childs & Keech, will be appealed, attorneys representing the broker said yesterday.

A jury in the court of Justice F. Dickinson Letts, in the District Supreme Court, awarded Brown $2,000 compensatory damages and $500 punitive damages. Attorneys Michael F. Keogh and Leonard Block noted an appeal in court as soon as a poll of the jury verified the verdict.

Brown said he was struck in the jaw by Garrett in the rear of the first floor of the theater September 11, 1932. The usher claimed he had been seriously and permanently injured, and, through attorneys Herbert S. Ward and Thomas Patterson, produced medical testimony to support his contention.

Bonus "Army" Goes in Camp At Fort Hunt

Leaders Expect 2,500 Here Before Close of Convention.

Exuding confidence they will win their fight this time, the 1934 bonus army members estableshed themselves at Fort Hunt yesterday and predicted their numbers will exceed 2,500 before the "convention's" scheduled close on May 24.

Long before sunset more than 500 had registered at a tent set up on Pennsylvania avenue between Third street and John Marshall place. As fast as the marchers are signed up, after producing honorable discharge papers, they were speeded off to Fort Hunt in special busses.

Outstanding developments yesterday in the march on Washington, besides occupation of the Civilian Conservation Corps Camp on the banks of the Potomac, were:

A near riot at a D street restaurant because it bore a sign reading "White Patrons Only."

Denial by the veterans' National rank and file committee, which is conducting the march, that any fee is being assessed the men.

Denial by the committee of a statement laid to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police chief, that the Workers Ex-Serviceman's League is the only organization in the march and the majority of World War veterans are not in sympathy with the movement.

Charges that the veterans' National rank and file committee is not interested in payment of the bonus also were attacked by Harold Hickerson, George Alman, James J. Beatty and other leaders.

The restaurant altercation occurred when about 100 members of the New York delegation, about a third of them colored, went there for breakfast. When service was refused to the colored group the men tore from the walls the "White Patrons Only" sign. Arrival of police from headquarters, only a stone's throw distant, prevented a serious outbreak.

In humorous contrast was the light touch provided by John Alferi, who styles himself the "One Man Bonus Army."

"No Fort Hunt for me," said the postcard sent to The Post by the war veteran, who has been here before on bonus marches. "I am here to get the bonus, not to ask for 'handout.'"

Dickinson Raps Thorp's Critics; May Quit Post

Hints He Will Resign if Commerce Bureau Post Is Denied.

"Dr. Thorp is on all sides admitted to be one of the most competent business analysts in the country. He is not a theoretical reformer, but an analyst of facts and figures.

"No protest against his confirmation was made by any respectable volume of business opinion on the ground that he did not have 'practical' business experience or on any other ground. Business knows only too well the value and importance of the analyst. No objection to his nomination based on any consideration of public interest was made from any source.

Charges Assailed.

"On the other hand, fabricated and untruthful charges of a miserable, petty, partisan character have been persistently circulated against him by a very small clique of disappointed office seekers, at least one of them closely associated with the Hoover Administration.

"The utter falsity and maliciousness of these charges has been emply demonstrated in the hearings before the sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Commerce and in Dr. Thorp's reply to the recent petition of the so-called 'Democratic Protective Committee.'

"I have no hesitation in admitting that for my own part I am a partisan Democrat. I am frank enough to admit that I have no sympathy with the white-robed and Pecksniffian hypocrisy which would exclude Democratic party workers from positions which their qualifications enable them to fill with advantage to the public interest.

"I emphatically do not believe, however, that it is in the interest of the Democratic party or of any party to exclude from highly technical positions requiring experts, competent men whose qualifications fit them preeminently for those positions, who are wholehearted supporters of the Administration, but who do not happen to have been active as party workers or to have accumulated a mountain of often insincere political indorsements.

Denies Personal Interest.

"I had no personal interest in Dr. Thorp's selection. I did not know him personally at the time. I do know that he has discharged his duties with admirable ability, fidelity and success and has gained by his service in office the increasing respect and commendation not merely of the business community, but of all who have had contact with his work.

"Unless a man of the same caliber and character as Dr. Thorp can be found who will accept appointment as director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and who can be confirmed by the Senate before the close of the present session, the bureau will be surrendered to patronage mongering in its pettiest and most contemptible form.

"The intrigues against Dr. Thorp have made the bureau a seething hotbed of personal manipulation on the part of men seeking to gain or retain appointments on which not merely their advancement but in some instances even their livelihood depends.

"If this condition continues, as it will inevitably continue, unless a director of the type of Dr. Thorp is appointed and confirmed, the usefulness of the bureau to the business community or to the public at large will be completely and, I believe, permanently paralyzed and destroyed.

Hints Resignation.

"Pending the determination of whether or not it will be possible to secure acceptance of the directorship of the bureau by a man of Dr. Thorpe's caliber and his confirmation at the hands of the Senate, I reserve consideration of my own future relation to the department."

It was generally believed that charges that Dr. Thorp once was registered as a Republican had some part in causing members of the Senate Commerce Committee to inform the White House he could not be confirmed.

The withdrawal was the first Senate defeat for the "brain trust," with which Dr. Thorp has been allied ever since he came to Washington. Many Senators are believed sharpening their hatchets for other professors in the Administration.

the President that he personally did not consider the token-paying nations in default, this was believed to indicate the word "default" would not be applied against those continuing to evidence good faith.

Significant loophole by which this might be accomplished was provided in the opinion of Attorney General Cummings, who announced that the Justice Department would follow any attitude the President chose to take. Although the Johnson act prohibits credit to those who default in whole or "in part," he interpreted "default" in a broad sense.

Envoys Seek Light.

While several of the smaller countries conceivably might feel it better to pay up this time to escape the Johnson act, it was thought the larger nations might discontinue what has become their habit of tendering part payments. In the case of the last British payment, it was recalled, Great Britain was assured her offer precluded any question of default.

Anxiously awaiting Mr. Roosevelt's debt message to Congress, which may or may not be limited to a report of conditions, foreign representatives have beat a steady path to the door of Undersecretary of State William Phillips. Those calling yesterday were Ambassador Augusto Rosso of Italy and Minister Ferdinand Veverka of Czechoslovakia.

Britain Sees Revised Settlement of Debt

London, May 10 (AP).—Strong hints that Great Britain expects a last-minute solution of the American war debt problem as a result of President Roosevelt's decisions were heard tonight in official circles.

The belief existed that the United States Executive, by emphasizing that Washington stands for collection of the obligations, but will grant hearings to nations seeking reduced payments, paved the way for moves which would permit a new debt arrangement.

"Great Britain is certain that some sort of amicable adjustment will be made before June 15," said one authority. "Britain is eager to discuss any proposal Mr. Roosevelt may have to offer."

While London seems determined that the President must make any proposal and does not have any suggestion of its own, it was generally known that the British government is prepared to go halfway toward any solution.

Code's Effect On Gas Studied

Senate Given Figures by Trade Board After Price Surveys.

Gasoline prices advanced 2 cents per gallon following enactment of the petroleum code, and retained a net gain of 1 cent, the Federal Trade Commission reported to the Senate yesterday in its study of the effect of the code on gasoline prices.

Following up its report of the effect of the steel code on that industry, the commission transmitted to the Senate the results of its similar study on gasoline. It had been felt by certain Senators that the code had resulted in higher prices, and the survey was undertaken in response to a Senate resolution.

On the basis of 1933 consumption, the commission reported, gasoline users were paying at an annual rate of about $160,000,000 more for the fuel on January 31, 1934, than they were on July 1, 1933. This estimate, it pointed out, was purely arbitrary and was subject to variation.

The commission reportde that the combination of State and Federal taxes on gasoline, ranging from 3 to 8 cents per gallon, costs consumers approximately $700,000,000 a year.

The petroleum code was approved August 19, 1933, and became effective early in September.

Nye said it was "foolishness" for the President to say the report needed digesting, since it was only 6,000 words long and included a summary.

"And I have never heard it said that Clarence Darrow did not write plain English," the North Dakotan added.

He said it was generally believed that one purpose near the President's heart was to aid the small business man, and that those who initiated the Darrow board "to investigate the disastrous effects of the NRA on the smaller industries did so with the idea such an inquiry would serve the aims of the President."

"When we heard that Mr. Darrow and a majority of the board were about to point out in plain terms how the NRA had hurt small business and how the NRA must be changed if this evil were to be remedied, we believed that the President would welcome the board's report," Nye continued.

"We supposed he would be ready to go down the line. Instead we find him suppressing the report and shrinking from having its criticisms made public."

Nye Sees Good in NRA.

Nye contended that unless NRA were reorganized it would "fade out of the picture." He said he thought that would be unfortunate. Many of the good things under NRA, such as limiting maximum hours of work, setting minimum wages, forbidding child labor and prohibiting unfair trade practices, should be saved, he said.

"But their benefits are more than counter-balanced by the evils coming from price-fixing agreements and that sort of thing, which give big business the chance to push little business to the wall," he asserted.

Nye pointed out that not a member of Congress has made a speech in this session applauding the NRA, and that those who have attacked the administration of the agency have been the recipients of congratulations of fellow members of every political faith.

Borah Brief But Caustic.

Borah's comment was brief but just as sharp. He said he did not want to be forced to participate in the introduction of a resolution calling on the President to make the report public. He hoped the White House would do so without any formal suggestion from Capitol Hill.

"The President's action speaks for itself," he asserted. "Any lawyer knows that the suppression of evidence is a sure sign that it is damaging to the one who suppresses it."

Senate Votes Down House Amendment; Jones Bill Reported.

market bill, the house Agricultural Committee favorably reported the Jones bill for regulation of commodity exchanges. Subsequently it was revealed that plans were being considered to inclde trading in cotton. The bill now covers only grain exchanges.

The committee, while conceding the bill was not a part of the emergency recovery program, urged its enactment by this Congress on the ground that with security exchanges being subjected to regulation "the professional speculator" may transfer his activities from the security markets to the commodity markets, with possibly disastrous results to producers of commodities."

"It is even conceivable that certain interests not in sympathy with the agricultural program will, through short selling and undercover dealing in the speculative markets, endeavor to defeat and destroy it," the report added.

Bill May Not Pass This Time.

It is doubtful whether the bill will be passed before Congress adjourns. If cotton trading is included under its provisions it is almost certain taht it will not, because Chairman Smith of the Senate Agricultural Committee is ardently opposed to Federal regulatoin of the cotton exchanges.

Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, sponsored the proposal to make the trade commission the admnistrator of the stock market bill. His chief argument was that the commission already had attained expert knowledge of security trading through its administration of the 1933 securities act.

Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, in a two-minute speech controverted this argument, and said he favored the provision in the bill creating a new Federal Securities Exchange Commission to administer the stock market bill as well as last year's securities act.

Doubts Expert Status.

"I can not agree the Trade Commission has expert knowledge of this subject," Pittman asserted. "I don't think any one on the commission or on its staff knows anything about securities trading."

In the 29-to-51 vote party lines split, while the division between conservatives and progressives was not clear. Such conservative Republicans as Austin and Gibson, of Vermont, voted for the Costigan proposal along with such progressives as Nye and Frazier, of North Dakota.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, sponsored the unsuccessful amendment to restrict the sections affecting issuing corporations. He proposed insertion of a provision that notwithstanding the requirements of these sections, the commission would not be entitled to order the filing of any information not necessary for the protection of investors.

Bill Too Drastic, Says Hastings.

Hastings contended that if the bill had been confined to its original objectives it would have been unanimously supported, but it went beyond these objectives, he said, by placing unjustifiable burdens on corporations. He argued that Congress was going to extremes due to public excitement and the creation of prejudice against a certain institution.

He said what was attempted in the bill was "pretty near equal to prohibition" because Congress was attempting to tell the people it could not do what it wanted to do.

"We are running ourselves ragged," he said, "to pass this bill quickly in order to protect some person who ought to have known better in the first place than to try to guess whether a stock is going up or down."

Senate D. C. Committee Adds Four Million to House Bill

ten rooms and gymnasium, $166,000; extension of auto repair shop and construction of gymnasium at Armstrong High School, $70,000; four-room addition to Bunker Hill School, $75,000; purchase additional lands at Phelps Vocational School for elementary school purposes, $55,000; additional amount for purchase of site for Jefferson Junior High School, $150,000; the $400,000 provided by the House for construction of the Woodrow Wilson High School was increased to $600,000.

These increases in the funds for schools had been asked by the District Commissioners, school officials and representatives of various citizens and other civic organizations of the neighborhoods affected as well as by individual residents. As passed by the House, the bill provided only for the Woodrow Wilson high school and $168,000 for an eight-room addition to the Browne Junior High School.

Write In Improvements.

The committee also wrote into the bill items for improvements and betterment of existing buildings. Among these items were $15,000 for equipment of the Shaw Junior High School, $175,000 for furniture and equipment of the Woodrow Wilson; $3,000 for transportation of children attending sight-saving classes; $13,336 for the Community Center Department and increases in personnel and other items.

The $28,352 provided by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was increased to $55,900. The House committee cut would have forced dismissal of most of the board's employes and inspection force.

Construction of sheds for produce farmers at the Southwest market was authorized at a cost of $22,500. The House bill made no provision.

The Public Utilities Commission, funds for which had been sharply cut by the House, was given an increase of $37,323 over the $51,000 provided in the House bill.

Approval was given the House items for the Public Library, including that of $150,000 for building a branch in Georgetown, but the committee made $4,500 of that amount immediately available for the preparation of plans and specifications.

The appropriation for the office of recorder of deeds, which had been so slashed by the House as to bring serious protests from members of the judiciary, the Commissioners, representatives of the District bar and others was increased by the Senate Committee by $26,746. The House item of $75,754 for salaries was increased to $100,000 and allowance for incidental expenses from $7,500 to $10,000.

First step toward construction of a bridge over the railroad tracks at Franklin street northeast was provided for in an item of $9,000 for surveys and engineering investigations.

Approval was given the $130,000 voted by the House for a bridge over the railroad tracks at Eastern avenue and other House items for street improvement and repair totaling $2,090,000 to be paid for out of the gasoline tax revenue.

The $20,094 House item for assessment and permit work by the sewer department was increased to $65,094 and unexpended balances were continued in effect. The appropriation for maintenance of playgrounds was increased from $30,000 to $33,600.

Plan New Fire Equipment.

Purchase and installation of fire alarm apparatus was authorized at a cost of $28,000. The House made no provision for this. The committee also provided $30,000 for the purchase of three combination hose wagons and one pumping engine. The House provided nothing for new apparatus.

Responding to pleas made by the Commissioners, Health Department officials and various civic organizations, the committee increased by $170,106 the House appropriation for public health work. The House figure of $34,398 for tuberculosis and some disease clinics was increased by $57,320 to $91,718; the department's funds for hygiene and sanitation work in the public schools was increased by $67,542 to $152,096, as against the House figure of $84,554, and the child welfare and hygiene appropriation was increased by $45,244 from the House figure of $45,834 to $91,078.

Welfare funds were increased. Among the larger sums voted over the House appropriations were $20,000 for board and care of children; $57,770 for personal services at the workhouse and reformatory; $15,000 for care of prisoners; $2,000 for a permanent water supply there; $20,000 for children's hospital; $15,000 for the Home for Incurables; $3,744 for the tuberculosis hospital; $11,500 for maintenance of children's tuberculosis sanatorium; $48,000 for personal services at Gallinger Hospital; $28,000 for an additional ward building there, and $11,000 for an addition to the colored women's ward at the Home for the Aged and Infirm.

One of the larger building items in the bill is $500,000 for construction of additions to the children's tuberculosis unit at Glendale, Md., for which the House made no provision. In all the committee increased the House public welfare items by $2,460,651.

Deadlock Grips Silver Parley; ResumesToday

Prospect of Agreement on Permissive Bill Still Is Good.

By Elliott Thurston.

What Senator Borah called a fundamental difference of opinion between President Roosevelt and the Senatorial silverites continued to deadlock the silver conferences yesterday.

Led by Senator King, the silverites who have not already walked out of or lost interest in the Treasury-silver group discussions, will resume conferences today with Secretary Morgenthau.

The prospects are still for agreement by the more amenable silverites upon a permissive bill. It would let Mr. Roosevelt, when and if he saw fit, build up a silver monetary reserve of 25 per cent, against 75 per cent in gold.

It may discard nationalization of domestic stocks. The silverites want it, but see complications. There would be a problem of banning imports, another problem as to how to make delivery on future contracts, still another of preventing speculation. Treasury proposals to levy a heavy tax deeply displease the silverites.

Borah, who left the conference flat Wednesday; Senator Elmer Thomas, inflationist leader, and Senator Wheeler, who wants 16-1 Bryanism, have lost all real interest in a permissive bill, but have concluded that the President will not stand for mandatory legislation.

Favor Price Increase.

However, what is dividing the silverites from the President is more basic. They want to boost the price of silver and to use it as an inflationary influence. He thinks in terms of international bimetallism and the use of silver to supplement gold stocks.

It may be that he is also thinking of exchanging some of this country's excess of gold for silver to aid in the gold redistribution which some economists think necessary to put the world back on a gold or gold-plus-silver standard. If so, however, there has been no hint of it. For one thing, Congress might not like the idea of giving up gold, even for silver.

Morgenthau went to the White House yesterday to recount the story of his abortive parley with the silverites on the day before. He came away reassured that Mr. Roosevelt is still against mandatory legislation save perhaps on nationalization which all hands agree is relatively unimportant.

A resumed conference of the silverites with Morgenthau was set for yesterday afternoon, but was called off in favor of one today.

Meanwhile, the amenable Democrats, like Senators King, Adams, Smith, Pittman and McCarran, were ready to give reluctant assent to the kind of bill Mr. Roosevelt wants. Senators Wheeler, Thomas and the already bolted Borah, had lost interest. Thomas said that, assuming there is agreement on a bill, it will "not be of any importance."

Predicts Agreement.

King predicts agreement and legislation. That it will be permissive, not mandatory, seems certain barring an unlikely Administration back-down. The question then will be whether Mr. Roosevelt means to amass a silver reserve of 25 per cent alone or in conjunction with other leading nations. Presumably he looks to an international monetary conference to discuss adoption of a "modernized" bimetallic standard.

As this country would have to acquire large stocks of silver to get a 25 per cent ratio against its gold holdings, the question would arise of letting some of our gold escape in exchange for silver in order to assist redistribution.

These cosmic aspects of silver have little inteerst for the Borah-Wheeler-Thomas school. They probably will vote apathetically for the Administration bill. But they will carry on their crusade for independent action to make silver prices higher and to create direct inflation.

BailCutDenied, Insull to Claim Illegal Seizure

'Shanghaied' From Greek Ship, He'll Say at Hearing Today.

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—Samuel Insull, once more denied an exit from the county jail for less than a quarter million dollars, will answer the Government's charge of mail frauds tomorrow with the charge that he was "shanghaied" from the Greek freighter Maiotis.

Attorney Floyd E. Thompson, Insull's attorney, announced this as the Insull forces laid one more seige to the jail, lost, and began efforts to bail Insull out at the Government's figure—$200,000.

"Mr. Insul will ask for an explanation of his status," said Thompson, "before he pleads guilty or not guilty to the Government's charges."

Insull will be arraigned tomorrow morning to be accused of defrauding investors and creditors out of a total of about $102,000,000. It will be the first step in the Government's prosecution.

Forsee Bail Today.

"We don't know yet whether Mr. Insull was deported, extradited, or just kidnaped," said Thompson. "I hold that he was shanghaied."

The Insull rescue forces believed tonight that they would be able to bail him out tomorrow, after he has appeared to answer the charges and make his own. With $150,000 on hand, Thompson and Insull's son, Samuel, jr., busied themselves adding up the values of property which Insull's friends had offered for security.

Insull's attorney bowed to this manner of freeing the utilities operator after a second Federal judge, Judge Will M. Sparks, had refused to cut Insull's bond, even though told it was the highest in American court history.

"Bond is not intended as a punishment," said the judge.

Entitled to Assurance.

"But the Government is entitled to assurance that Mr. Insull will be on hand for the trial. I will refuse his application for a reduction of bond.

"If Insull's friends will not stand good for $200,000, they should not ask this court to stand the burden."

After collecting the Federal bond Insull must dig up $50,000 more on State indictments.

Insull, lounging comfortably in a wheel chair throne in the county jail's hospital, heard the news without excitement.

Insull showed a flash of fire today in talking about his case.

"I have been made a scapegoat by financial collapse," he said. "It's nearing time when there will be a showdown."

Dr. Francis J. McNamara and Insull's family physician, Dr. Arthur R. Elliott, cautioned him against excitement.

AAA Wheat Land Check Set Tuesday

9 Eastern Shore Counties to Be Inspected.

Chestertown, Md., May 10 (Spl.). A general inspection of wheat acreage in the nine Eastern Shore counties will start Tuesday, it is announced by agents of the University of Maryland Extension Service. It will be a check on whether or not wheat growers have lived up to their agreement with the Federal Government on reduced acreage.

The inspection committee will consist of one or two surveyors appointed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and from five to seven farmers to be named by the board of directors of each county wheat-production control association.

The inspection will be completed, it is believed, by June 15, and within 30 days checks for the balance of the original 30 cents a bushel, for curtailment, will be available to producers who signed contracts with AAA. Twenty cents a bushel for curtailment was paid last fall and amounted, in Kent County alone, to $55,000. In this county $18,000 yet due will be paid to growers within the next two months, according to J. D. McVean, extension agent here.

$417,000,000 Tax Bill Signed By Roosevelt

Plugs Holes in Income Law Through Which Rich Escaped.

President Roosevelt's signature of a $417,000,000 tax bill last night hiked the levies on coupon-clipping classes and plugged the holes through which J. P. Morgan and other rich men escaped income-tax payments.

The new law digs deeper into the strong boxes of the wealthy to to help pay recovery taxes, but lightens the burden on the "little fellows" who file 90 per cent of income tax returns. The new provisions are effective on this year's income, on which taxes will be due next March.

Closing of the loopholes that enabled many of the wealthy legally to avoid heavy payments was accompanied by announcement of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings that the Government intended to press its income tax avoidance cases against Thomas S. Lamont, Morgan partner, and former Mayor James J. Walker of New York, despite failure of a grand jury to support similar charges against Andrew W. Mellon.

Oil Tax Opposed.

The President, signing the tax bill in the presence of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Congressional leaders, appeared well satisfied with all provisions save one. This is the levy of 3 cents per pound on Philippine coconut oil. He believes this will place an unfair burden on the islands as they are struggling to right their industry and finances for independence.

The President soon will send Congress a message about this tax, written into the bill by farm interests to protect domestic vegetable oils against foreign competition. Mr. Roosevelt probably will ask Congress to repeal the levy.

The new law levies more heavily on the rich through higher surtaxes on large incomes, higher estate and gift taxes, taxes on personal holding companies, adjustment of deductions permitted for losses, and other ways.

It strikes into a new field of taxation with a direct levy on capital. This is only one-tenth of 1 per cent on the capital stock of corporations, but it is estimated to yield $95,000,000 annually.

Records of total income, deductions and income taxes paid must be open to public inspection. This was put into the act at the behest of Congressmen who believed it would be a deterrent to tax evasion.

Helps Small Incomes.

Lower taxes on small incomes are based on the Roosevelt principle that men who earn their living should receive preferential treatment over those who clip coupons.

In accordance with this principle a 10 per cent deduction is allowed on income derived from salaries or wages. All income up to $14,000 annually is automatically placed in this category.

Thus while the normal tax rate is left unchanged at 4 per cent and personal exemptions remain the same, the married man with no dependents who receives a $3,000 salary will pay only $8, compared with $20 now.

Some "nuisance" taxes are repealed. The two-cent levy on bank checks ends January 1. Taxes on candy, soft drinks and clocks are out. Jewelry retailing for less than $25 is exempt.

High lights of other important sections:

Surtaxes—Four to 59 per cent on incomes from $4,000 to $1,000,000; present rates 1 to 31 per cent.

Estate Tax Revision.

Estate tax—$50,000 exempted; 1 per cent on first $20,000 additional ranging up to 60 per cent on $10,000,000.

Excess profits tax—Five per cent on earnings in excess of 12½ per cent on "declared" value of a corporation's stock.

Personal holding companies—Thirty per cent on first $100,000 of undistributed net income of such companies, plus 40 per cent on all above that.

Capital gains and losses—Permits deduction of losses only to extent of similar gains, on sums in excess of $2,000; 100 per cent of gains of capital assets to be taxed if the assets are held less than one year; 80 per cent if held from one to two years and down to 30 per cent if more than ten years.

Consolidated tax returns—Forbids corporations, except railroads, to file consolidated returns in which profits of one subsidiary are canceled by losses of another.

Wire Control Bill Assailed By Phone Head

Rayburn Measure Means Ruin; Gifford Tells House Group.

The telephone business is now adequately regulated and the Rayburn communications bill is an attempt to set up a regime of public management over private property, Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., told the House Interstate Commerce Committee yesterday.

The bill would take over control of all communications under an agency assuming present regulatory functions of the Interstate Commerce and the Federal Radio Commissions.

Gifford told the committee that business is on the upgrade and that his company is making telephone installations at the rate of 500,000 a year. He said this is an increase of 3 to 5 per cent. The increase, he said, began last September in the South and Southwest and spread over the country. During the depression, he said, the company disconnected 2,500,000 telephones.

"Federal control will wreck the telephone industry," Gifford told the committee. "Present decentralized and adaptable operation would be transferred into rigid, centralized bureaucratic operation. This would devitalize the very principles of management which have been responsible for progress of telephony in this country.

"I am certain no power on earth can assure effective management and good service if it is necessary that ordinary transactions of this Nation-wide enterprise wait upon hearings before a commission in Washington."

R. B. White, president of the Western Union Telegraph Co., who was expected to testify yesterday, was asked to appear today instead.

While the committee was hearing testimony on the communications problems, the National Recovery Administration issued a statement clarifying the proposed telegraph code. Administrator Hugh S. Johnson said the code was not intended to interfere with rates for transmission of news.

Johnson invited protests by letter or otherwise "if it is felt that any provisions in the proposed code interfere with present relationships existing between the telegraph communication companies and the press."

The controversial section of the code proposes that no telegraph company shall permit a rate for any class of service which would be discriminatory "against users of any other class of service." This provision was construed as possibly affecting Government messages as well as press messages.

3-State Park Highway Bids Believed Near

Great Smoky, Shenandoah Route Studied by Byrd, Va. Road Chief.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, said yesterday that Henry G. Shirley, Old Dominion highway commissioner, is hopeful that bids will be advertised in the near future for constructing the first 30 to 40 miles of the parkway that is to connect Shenandoah and Great Smoky Mountain National Parks.

Shirley conferred yesterday with Thomas H. MacDonald, Public Roads Bureau chief, and later talked with Byrd.

Although the route of the parkway through Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee has not been detemined, Public Roads Bureau officials said it was generally understood that the northern stretch of the parkway would be from Shenandoah Park's southern tip, near Waynesboro, to the peaks of Otter in Bedford County. It would be over a mountain route and would not touch any towns.

Surveys now are in progress all along the proposed parkway in the three States, and bureau officials said preliminary surveys have been completed for some distance south of Shenandoah Park.

"Locating" surveys, they said, would be necessary before Virginia could be advised just what land the Government desires for the parkway. The three States agreed to furnish the rights of way for the scenic route.

Bureau officials said they were not advised what procedure Virginia would follow in acquiring the needed land. It might be done by condemnation or through gift or purchase.

The distance between the two National parks is more than 400 miles. The Public Works Administration has earmarked $4,000,000 for a start on it. It has been estimated that a total of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 would be needed.

Capital Horse Show's Riders Defy Showers

Bradley Farms Contest Resumes as Storm Routs Rail Birds.

By Marian May.

Hopes for the first clear opening day in four years for the National Capital Horse Show at Bradley Farms were badly dampened as yesterday's thunderstorm, which came after the first seven classes had been run off, sent rail birds and riders helter-skelter for shelter and left others crouching in the grandstand aisles in a futile attempt to evade the drenching torrents.

The show resumed amid intermittent showers and chilly breezes and, although the footing became heavy, it was no worse than that often encountered in the hunting field, and good jumpers experienced little difficulty in negotiating the obstacles.

Upsets throughout the day were provided by Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, whose string failed to do as well as was expected of them in the hunter and jumper classes.

Bon Diable Wins.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney's magnificent gray hunter, Bon Diable, made the most outstanding victory of the day by defeating Mrs. Guggenheim's old reliable Firenze Red Tape in the class for qualified or green hunters. The gray made the round of obstacles steady and confident, giving a remarkable exhibition of hunter handiness, while the famed brown gelding of Firenze Farm jumped sloppily.

In the touch and out event, Mrs. Guggenheim's four renowned open jumpers failed to finish in the ribbons. After an exciting jump-off between Quicksilver, Bloomfield and Wise, all of whom had made perfect scores the first time around, it remained for Bloomfield and Wise to jump off for first place, wherepuon Wise sailed at his fences, with another clean score, and was awarded the blue. Bloomfield, after a tick at the third jump, was second. Both are Army horses, undergoing strenuous drilling every day where the horses must be good.

Gulf Breeze Is Flashy.

Gulf Breeze, Miss Marjorie McLeod's showy dark chestnut gelding, in winning the ladies' saddle class for three-gaited horses, gave a flashy exhibition, which may carry the little chestnut again to the saddle horse championship. Gulf Breeze captured the championship here last year, and since that victory has won several more important championships and numerous blues.

Today's schedule commences at a. m. The following classes will take place in the order named:

Working hunters to be shown over an outside course; hunters, 5and 6 year olds, to be shown under saddle; local saddle horses; local hunters, to compete for the Peter Voorhees de Graw Memorial Trophy, presented by Mr. Edwin B. de Graw; 5-foot jump, Equestrian Fund Sweepstakes for open jumpers, thoroughbred hunters, troopers' mounts, ladies' hunters, pairs of hunters, hunter hacks, dressage exhibition, officers' chrages, corinthian class, park saddle horses, triple bar jumping.

Youthful Cripple, In Bed Ten Years, Dies at Norfolk

Norfolk, Va., May 10 (Spl.). Death claimed Kenneth McGrath, 16, yesterday, after he had been bedridden for ten years.

He was a charge at St. Vincent's Hospital all these years, and was the favorite of the hospital attaches and the physicians who came there to see him and other patients. He was a hopeless cripple.

His food, clothing and playthings were provided by the Sisters. Owing to an early affliction, Kenneth was not able to speak as clearly as other children, but he learned to recite the prayers that were taught him with great patience by the Sisters. He was given every medical attention possible, but was never able to leave his bed.

Besides his parents, George Semmes and Agnes McGrath, young McGrath is survived by a number of brothers and sisters.

Understanding Justice.

Courts exist theoretically not so much to punish as to mete out justice. But the definition of that word is often hard. Many a judge must wonder, as he sentences a prisoner to waste his time in jail, whether that act will really benefit humanity. What good purpose does it serve to lock up a man who is not really a criminal, especially when the victims of his transgression receive no redress except, perhaps, the pitiful knowledge that the cause of their distress is being punished?

A White Plains (N. Y.) judge sat on a case involving manslaughter the other day. Before him was a man who, during a quarrel, had knocked a friend to the ground. The friend died. The prisoner was the father of three children; so was the victim of the assault. If the judge, who was forced by the weight of evidence to find the prisoner guilty, had sent him to jail, six children, instead of three, would have suffered. The man was earning $59 a week. Rather than imprison him for ten years, as a less understanding judge would have done, the court suspended his sentence.

Judge Coyle did not, however, permit mercy to distort justice. He ordered, as terms of parole, that the guilty man pay the costs of his victim's funeral and also pay the widow $15 a week, so that the dead man's family might not be in want. The assault victim, the evidence showed, had been drinking with the defendant before the assault. Now the defendant must refrain from indulging in alcohol for five years or the suspension will be dropped, and he will be committed to jail.

The judge said he thought this unusual sentence would be "for the best interests of society." It is a humane sentence, which fits the circumstances, and really meets the ends of justice. Judge Coyle is to be commended, not only for having made the transgressor pay for his crime, but for devising such a constructive penalty.

Germany's "Free" Press.

Germany is beginning to realize the danger of a strangled press. Stringent restrictions on what newspapers may print, where their representatives may go in search of news, and the extent of editorial opinion they may express, have been somewhat ameliorated by order of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels. Ehm Welk, the "guileless Parsifal" who took seriously a previous invitation to criticize the present government, has been released from jail.

Two principal reactions brought about these changes. Most important was the fact that the rest of the world laughed loud and long at Nazi Germany when Goebbels invited criticism and then jailed an editor for accepting the invitation. The Nazis can not stand laughter at their own expense. The second factor was that the censored newspapers were getting intolerably dull. Several had ceased publication for want of readers. Circulation of others was dropping at an alarming rate.

It is not because Nazi Germany is coming to its senses and realizing the need for a free press that the dictatorial suppression of news and opinion is being officially mitigated. It is because Dr. Goebbels realized at last that if his government forced the newspapers into intolerable dullness he would eventually lose what audience he had for the official dicta of Nazism. Newspapers filled only with official releases and songs of praise for those in power soon become, as the public shows by its indifference, fit only to line shelves.

In the light of past experiences we can hardly expect a truly free press in Germany for a long time to come. Nazism and freedom are poor bedfellows. The lessening of restrictions is more a bid for circulation than a gesture of heartfelt tolerance on the part of Hitler and his supporters.

Forgotten?

In a report to the Interstate Commerce Commission last March, Coordinator Eastman made a number of excellent recommendations for strengthening and coordinating Federal control over transportation agencies. He suggested legislation for the regulation of water carriers and motor buses, and proposed certain amendments to the interstate commerce act extending his control over rates.

Mr. Eastman made an especially strong plea for coordinated Federal regulation of all these transportation agencies to obtain a well-knit national system, with a minimum of waste and duplication. To achieve this end, it was urged that Federal regulation be centralized in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The coordinator noted particularly that industrial self-regulation by common carriers, such as motor bus lines, is not adapted to the needs of the situation, and is likely to result in conflicts of interest.

What has happened to Mr. Eastman's recommendations? His warnings of a conflict of interest between the rail carriers and rival tranport agencies point to conspicuous evils that call for correction. Why has Congress failed to take action in this case when it finds time to consider so many legislative proposals that ought to be consigned to oblivion in order to serve the public interest?

Direct Loans To Industry.

Rival plans to advance intermediate credit loans to industry through the Federal Reserve Banks and the RFC are to be combined into a single measure, apparently with the approval of President Roosevelt. Both the House and the Senate Banking Committees are expected to report favorably upon this omnibus measure.

It seems probable that the need for intermediate credits to provide industrial working capital has been greatly exaggerated. Few prospective borrowers who are good credit risks are likely to be denied the credits needed to carry on their operations. However, loans may not always be obtainable for the length of time desired by borrowers in need of working capital. Some borrowers may also be handicapped by lack of banking facilities in parts of the country where closings have been numerous. Consequently, the Glass bill may perform a useful service in making systematic provision for industries short of working capital.

The bill throws certain safeguards about the granting of direct loans to industry. It also provides that financial institutions discounting the paper of industrial applicants for intermediate credits shall assume part of the risks attaching to the transaction. If prospective borrowers are unable or unwilling to comply with reasonable demands of this sort, a properly managed banking system can not afford to grant them credit.

Unless it is desired to subsidize industry, therefore, it is difficult to explain why the RFC should be authorized to supplement the intermediate credits obtainable under the Glass bill, by advancing an additional $300,000,000. If the advances are to be safeguarded in accordance with sound banking practice, a division of responsibility for providing this kind of credit accommodation seems quite unwarranted. The explanation, no doubt, is found in Chairman Jones' significant statement that the RFC intermediate loans to small and medium-sized industries would "carry more than the usual credit risk." He added, however, that unless the demand of such concerns is met our relief problems will continue to multiply.

If industries are to be supported by grants of Government credits in order to provide employment to more people it would be better to acknowledge the fact instead of handing out subsidies in the guise of intermediate credit loans. Advances of this sort would increase the political pressure upon the RFC and offer opportunities for favoritism that would inevitably escape the detection of the most vigilant officials.

Under the best of conditions, with strictly drawn laws, Government lending agencies are seriously handicapped by the political influences brought to bear upon them. The plan for advancing intermediate credits to industry through the RFC does not even carry adequate legal safeguards against loss. The proviso that the borrower must be solvent in the opinion of the board of directors is a very limited protection. Moreover, the explanatory remarks of Chairman Jones indicate that losses are expected to result from this proposed venture of the RFC into the general banking business.

Machines And Men.

The theory that overinvestment in capital equipment is the major cause of unemployment has become an article of faith with many people. They assume that the opportunities for future profitable expansion have been exhausted or can only be exploited at the expense of the laboring masses who will be progressively excluded from productive employment as the efficiency of mechanical agencies of production increases. It is encouraging to find that this conclusion has recently been challenged in articles appearing in the London Economist and the Frankfurter Zeitung.

The German discussion points out that from 1924 to 1932 the yearly investment in machinery was about 30 per cent below that of the prewar year 1913. During this period the increased productivity of German industry was achieved, it is maintained, by reorganization—often called rationalization—of industry. This kind of reorganization, which eliminated unnecessary motion and reduced waste, did not provide released labor with other occupations, as might have been the case if there had been increased utilization of machinery affording new employment openings.

Another writer for the London Economist is equally positive from a study of British industrial unemployment statistics that "such periodical drops in employment as have occurred have been the consequences, not of production increasing at the expense of employment, but of a falling off in general demand, due to monetary and other causes." As the case against improved machine methods is based largely upon the thesis that unemployment is due to an abnormally rapid increase in productive output per worker, this argument buttresses that of the German writer.

Instead of wasting time bemoaning an alleged lack of openings for new capital investments, the efforts of our economists could be directed much more profitably toward a study of the causes of contraction and expansion in specific industries. Business is dynamic and workers are at all times becoming superfluous in certain employments for innumerable causes, technological and nontechnological. But there are always trades and industries ready to expand even in periods of depression, and thus to absorb excluded labor. That process of transfer is, as the London Economist says, retarded but it is, nevertheless, going on and will be accelerated as conditions improve.

District Appropriations.

District institutions have been given far more sympathetic treatment by the Senate Appropriations Committee than they received from the House. It does not appear that the Senate group has been generous to the Capital City, but apparently it listened to the facts presented by District officials and decided against curtailment of necessary municipal service. As the supply bill was reported to the Senate it carries appropriations amounting to $37,224,845 in comparison with $32,650,658 in the House bill.

One of the most important items restored to the bill is $37,323 for the Public Utilities Commission. A slash in the allowance for this body by the House threatened to paralyze the important work of regulating utilities in the District. Since the Senate committee is matching an estimate resulting from deliberate judgment against a figure dictated by personal malice and politics, there is no question as to which should prevail.

The allowance for schools would be increased by $1,272,221. Funds would be available for construction of the proposed Anacostia Junior High School and various other much needed educational buildings. Additional facilities to aid in the fight against tuberculosis would also be provided. Gallinger Hospital would be allowed funds for a new ward building and to end the 12-hour shifts of nurses and attendants. The present standard of street lighting would be maintained.

As between the House and Senate bills the issue is clearly drawn. The House made several arbitrary cuts—even below the estimates recommended by the Budget Bureau—some of them apparently designed to punish District agencies. Conversely, the Senate committee has attempted to make a limited revenue go as far as possible toward meeting the municipal needs of Washington.

Some credit is due the Senate group for replacing that huge chip taken by the House from the Federal contribution to the District. Yet the committee's reversion to the lump sum of $5,700,000 is disappointing. Congress reduced its allowance to the Capital City to this figure last year because of a heavy slash in the local budget. Now the budget is increasing again. The bill reported to the Senate carries $6,849,050 more than was appropriated for the current year. Yet the Federal contribution is held at last year's level. In other words, Congress takes advantage of a shrinking budget to slash the lump sum, and then fails to augment it when the budget expands once more.

Considerable hope was held out that the Senate committee would evolve a more equitable plan of dividing the cost of maintaining the National Capital. But it has fallen back upon the old expedient. Budget-making in Washington will never be satisfactory until Congress recognizes its responsibility for supplying a definite percentage of the total sum that is appropriated annually.

Delay On The Airport.

Emphatic reindorsement of Gravelly Point as a site for Washington's permanent airport seems to have been the chief result of a conference between civic leaders and Department of Commerce officials on Wednesday. A resolution adopted after a protracted discussion calls for immediate hearings on the Gibson bill which would authorize development of the Gravelly Point site. In view of this strong backing that measure appears to offer the most practical approach to the problem.

A committee of Senators was named several weeks ago to study the Gibson bill. Apparently it has remained inactive only because its members are busy with other legislative matters. In the meantime, however, the need for a modern airport here has become more critical. Two additional air lines will soon begin using Washington Airport, which is notoriously inadequate and hazardous. The local airport problem thus takes on the nature of an emergency.

While the Gibson bill is principally concerned with the construction of a permanent airport at Gravelly Point, it would also authorize improvement of the air terminal now in use. Military road, which cuts through Washington Airport, menacing motorists as well as airplane passengers, could be removed and temporary extension of the field would be possible. In this way the worst hazards of flying in Washington might be removed while a permanent airport is being constructed.

Since the airport situation here has been extensively studied and an increasing majority of the bodies interested in the orderly development of the Capital City is leaning toward the Gravelly Point site there seems to be no justification for further delay in Congress. The very fact that several years may be required to build the contemplated terminal makes action during the present session more urgent.

Insull says he's afraid he won't get justice in the United States. So are we.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

MME. LILLIAN NORDICA died after suffering a relapse from pnuemonia. She was a famous American operatic singer, the wife of George W. Young, a New York banker, and had admirers that "ranged from the man of the Bowery, where she had sung at mission meetings, to the critical box holders of grand opera houses in all of the world's great musical centers."

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

WHEN COL. H. H. ROGERS, of New York, and his daughter, Millicent, sailed for New York aboard the S. S. France and Count Salm Von Hoogstrasten took the Orient express for Vienna another international romance was smashed. It was reported that Col. Rogers paid $100,000 to break the engagement.

What Causes Accidents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: William A. Van Duzer, Washington's traffic director, wants to know what is causing the rapid increase of auto accidents in the city. Drivers are not alone to blame. If a driver passes a red light or goes ahead against the traffic officer he has a chance to "tell it to the judge." But pedestrians walk all over the streets without paying the slightest attention to where they are going.

Reading newspapers while crossing a busy street is one way to avoid old age. Pedestrians are supposed to observe the traffic regulations, but I have never observed them doing it. By strolling out casually into heavy traffic they cause cars to sideswipe each other and to make sudden unannounced stops. I have seen women deliberately walk across traffic, daring the cars to run over them. Sometimes they get hurt, and when they do, through their own disregard for safety, the driver of the car is accused of speeding, reckless driving, defective brakes, and what have you? Dashing out from between parked cars is another source of danger that pedestrians, generally, give little heed to.

Another cause of accidents is from drivers ignoring traffic signs. Pulling away from a parking space at a curb without looking to see what is coming is another cause for trouble. Making "U" turns on streets marked "No U turns," especially Eleventh street northwest from Pennsylvania avenue to F street, causes many a mix-up in those two blocks. The drivers who get as close to the curb as possible to make left turns and those who turn right from the center of the street are not doing anything to help the situation.

Then there is the "smart guy" who wants to show off what a skillful driver he is and cuts in and out of line. The driver who can not make up his mind is a very real source of danger. Parking so close to stop signs that they can not be seen has caused plenty of serious accidents.

I could go on indefinitely, but in conclusion let me say that if the traffic officers were instructed to go after the real offenders and not devote so much time to ticketing parked cars, which may be a nuisance but are not actually a menace unless so parked that they obscure signs, then we might enjoy a month when the accident count fell off.

Distressed Depositors.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your fine paper has become such a good means of getting help with many problems that I thought if you could spare the space for the benefit of many who are still troubled about their money in closed banks we might get a little definite information as to the status of several banks which were closed for various reasons prior to the bank holiday in March, 1933. One of these, the Bank of Brightwood, has been closed as far as regular banking business is concerned for almost two years and has paid nothing to its depositors since May, 1933, and yet a receiver and two or three others are drawing salaries and diminishing the chances of further payments being forthcoming. Surely those who have lost so much of their hard-earned savings are entitled to some definite information as to the probable outcome. Is there any way of getting this information? ONE OF MANY.

Ima But Not Ura.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I write apropos of The Post Impressionist's column of May 8 and his mention of the tradition of the names of Gov. Hogg's children. This tradition dies hard.

Although the name of the Governor's eldest daughter was Ima, it was given her, not by her father, but by her mother, from the heroine of a novel she greatly liked. Mrs. Hogg did not at the time notice the incongruity. There was no daughter named Ura, and the only son was James, jr. The punning names Ura and More, later attributed to the younger children, were newspaper jokes.

The writer has this from a lady who was a guest at a dinner in Gov. Hogg's honor at Nacogdoches, Tex., at the home of a close personal friend of the Governor, Mr. William Mims, now deceased. The question of the children's names came up and Gov. Hogg himself made the statement here set forth.

"Sensible Suggestions."

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: In spite of the flippant criticism to which they are so constantly subjected, Congressmen do, occasionally and without the aid of omniscient braintrusters, produce suggestions for legislation which smack more of good common sense than many of the "stratospheric" proposals originated by our supposedly Aristotelian Tugwells et al!

One of these is the McLeod bill, which would thaw out the frosted assets of those closed banks which for a year or more have resembled so many costly tombstones commemorating the hectic, hysterical finance of speculation. It's enactment by Congress would not only strengthen public confidence in an Administration, but also directly and promptly put a goodly number of worthy citizens, who suffered financial loss because of too much faith in banks controlled by our Federal system, onto their business feet again, and so make a real contribution to economic recovery.

Another highly sensible suggestion originating in Congress is that made by a Texas Representative to the effect that it would be a wise policy to increase our Army by at least 30,000 additional units. Would not such a sensible addition make a considerable and valuable contribution in the fight against unemployment? Most assuredly, and at less expense to us than through any other agency! The forestry enterprise has proven an excellent mode of helping our youths, yet as a matter of cold figures an army recruit costs us less than a forestry worker, less by one third! And, in addition, the preliminary preparations would be less extensive and expensive, the army posts and camps are here now, and enlistments for a year would, easily care for a large percentage of those young fellows who now are being forced into competition for work or into idleness. This is a common sense proposal—but will it pass?

ROBERT MACADIE.

The Flight of Technics

In Munich there is a man who will probably read the reports of the British-Japanese trade war and say, "I told you so." His name is Oswald Spengler, philosopher of the machine civilization. In his last book, Spengler said, "The flight of the born leader from the machine is beginning." The "born leader" in the making of cotton textiles is England. Now Japan has challenged England for that leadership. The answer is a quota on Japanese exports to Britain's crown colonies; there is an economic war in progress.

The flock of alibis which fill the newspaper cannot obscure the basic facts. Japan has learned the secret of the machine. Japan is applying its knowledge with more success than its Western mentors. Like the industrial revolution itself, its success is the fruit of a gradual process of absorption. It rises superior to the subsidiary advantages of a depreciated currency and cheap labor. These explanations, indeed, are pernicious. They create fears and animosities. They beget an unwarrantable feeling that failure to meet the new competition is solely due to factors beyond control.

Japan's success in the world's trade in cotton textiles may be summed up fundamentally in a word: organization. When Japan went in for industrialization, it already possessed this great advantage. For "the Hermit Kingdom" woke up in the sixties without sacrificing the organizational advantages of a feudal system. The state took the place of the lord in the allegiance of the Japanese—the state as personified in the Mikado. And it was the state that guided the country into industrialization.

So there was no stage of industrial laissez faire. Several great families, despised merchants in the era of feudalism, were the agents of industrialization. But, either through intermarriage with the old class or through the subsidy system, they gradually became indistinguishable from the state itself. Thus, before cartels were ever heard of, Japan had them. Before rationalization became a new word in the language, the lexicon of Japanese business had a place for it. Before the state began to dominate the economic life of the West, the Japanese Government, with its subsidy system, was at the head and front of Japan's economic life. Japan, in the words of Mr. Arno S. Pearse, head of the Lancashire Cotton Federation developed into one huge trust.

Britain, being the first modern industrial nation, is still wedded to individualism. While the cotton textile industry in Japan is one single chain made up of links of buying, shipping and delivery of raw material at the mills, and of manufacture and distribution of the finished product, the British industry is composed of innumerable small units. Where the few rule in Japan, the many rule in England. Such solidification of industry as there is in Japan has no counterpart in England except in the finishing sections and subsidiary trades. Competitively, however, the advantage contained in this superior organization remained in the potential stage till the Japanese workman came abreast of the British workman in skill. This now seems to have been achieved. Then, too, the differential between British and Japanese wages must be considered.

For years the British have been warned of the true dimensions of the Japanese challenge. Experts and economists revealed what was happening long before Spengler set pen to paper. Their reports may be found in the dust-covered files of learned societies and technical organizations alike. "Of the many problems which beset the British cotton industry," stated Bernard and Hugh Ellinger, high authorities in the British cotton trade, "there is none more urgent than that of solidifying the small firms with larger units comparable in size and importance with the amalgamations on the crust."

British industry, if it wishes to hold its supremacy in the world textile trade, still has to learn this lesson. It must realize from its own pupil that the flight of technics has robbed the British of their old monopoly in manufacturing skill. The trade war has brought out this great historical fact in a vivid light. (The Christian Science Monitor.)

The Post Impressionist

What Is a Child?

Postoffice, Friday.

"WHEN it comes to discussing films for children, the trouble is that Mrs. Belmont, on the one side, and you on the other side, are barking up the wrong tree."

With such admirable inclusiveness can a critic criticise Mrs. August Belmont, "on the one side," for saying that there is too much love and crime in the cinema—and criticise us, "on the other side," for saying that we didn't quite agree with her.

The proper question, our double-barrelled condemner would have us believe, is not what sort of movies are best for children. The proper question is: "What is a child?" In other words, when is a human being old enough to see, safely, an adult film?

* * * *

Of course, that is one approach to the general subject. Certainly, upon the problem of what sort of film a child ought not to see there is a wide difference of opinion among such nations of this earth as have legislated in the premises.

Spain and Rumania permit minors "only films of an educational nature," though "educational" seems to us a rather elastic adjective. Tunis shuts her children out from all "detective stories." Italy and Latvia forbid young folks any pictures that "may overstimulate the imagination." Denmark agrees with this and specifies particularly "exhibitions of alcoholism." South Africa bars "low habits of life" in general. More general still, San Salvador, Sweden, Norway, Czechoslovakia and Morocco keep their youngsters from whatsoever movie might be "liable to have a bad influence on physical, intellectual or moral development."

And kisses? Why, even on screens intended for grown-ups, "a kiss is not tolerated" in Japan.

So it really does appear to the superficial eye as if there might be something in the theory that reformers ought to agree on when a child is a child.

* * * *

Unfortunately, reformers have tried to agree on this, and found that they couldn't. Not nationally, anyway.

* * * *

For several years an international child-welfare commission, with headquarters at Geneva, attempted vainly to get the world's governments together on some arbitrary answer. "When," they asked, "is a child too young to be taken by proper guardians to a motion picture theater of any sort?"

"Until the age of 6," replied Germany, Latvia, Nicaragua and Peru.

"Until the age of 5," declared Hungary.

"Three!" cried San Salvador.

Nor would any country compromise.

* * * *

"And how old should a minor be," inquired the Commission, "in order to gain entry unaccompanied by a responsible adult?"

Here are the responses:
San Salvador, 8 years.
Greece and Spain, 10.
Nicaragua, 13.
Cuba, Ecuador, Japan and Uruguay, 14.
Italy and Sweden, 15.
Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, Latvia, Norway and Peru, 16.

No legislation had been passed on this subject, and no rulings made, by the Argentine, China, Esthonia, France, Monaco, Spain, Turkey or Venezuela. And they did not contemplate any.

Moreover, here again all consulted countries stood pat. Apparently, children mature more rapidly in Spain than in Uruguay—a year more rapidly in Sweden than in neighboring Finland. And that is all there is about it!

* * * *

One last effort the Commission made. There was no possibility of agreement upon the age issue. There was no immediate hope of an international code to decide what young people, the world over, might or might not see at a motion-picture theater. But couldn't there be a system of continuous and friendly advice, an issuing of national bulletins internationally, each country telling its neighbors what it thought of current films in relaton to its—well, you might call them its current children? So the Commission sent out this inquiry to some 30 governments—not, we believe, including our own:

"Can any arrangements usefully be made for the exchange of information between different countries in regard to films which (are considered) good or bad for minors?"

The answers were not propitious. The only unqualified affirmatives came from Denmark, Esthonia, Japan, Norway, Poland and Turkey. The other replies ranged all the way from Czechoslovakia's "It would be a matter of difficulty," to Belgium's "The aim in view can not be realized."

* * * *

The story goes that one of the Commissioners, a prominent Dutch pedagogue, lately took his 16-year-old son on a northern European tour. One evening, at Oslo, the father had a business appointment and suggested that the boy pass the time by going to a motion picture theater where a certain French historical film was showing.

"But who'll take me?" the son inquired.

"Nobody," answered the pedagogue. "It is only in Holland and in Germany that you have to be 18 to go alone. Here the rule is 16."

"Why, this is the film they would not let even you take me to in Brussels!"

"That was because of a Belgian ruling."

"Father, I don't understand. Why is it wrong for me to go alone to any film in Holland, when it isn't wrong for me to go alone in Norway to a film that is wrong for me to go to, even with a parent, in Belgium?"

* * * *

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

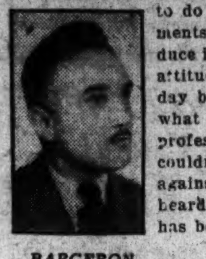
IN spite of current rumors I doubt seriously that any of the Young Liberals will resign because the Senate rejected one of their number, Dr. Willard L. Thorp, late professor of economics at Amherst, as director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. The only one whose indignation might bring him to this, Assistant Secretary of Commerce Dickinson, keeps his feet well on the ground. However, he may quit.



BARGERON.

The others will undoubtedly feel quite bitter, but they aren't likely to do more than write letters home or make statements to the effect that it is most difficult to introduce intelligence into our Government. This is their attitude. It was expressed very clearly the other day by the prodigy, Prof. A. A. Berle. Discussing what seems to be a developing feeling against the professors, he said, very ponderously, that he couldn't understand why there should be complaint against intelligence in government. Frankly I have heard of no complaint against intelligence. There has been considerable against the professors.

* * * *

Even our own editor in the case of Dr. Thorp looks upon his rejection as a blow against intelligence in government. It may be. I don't know the gentleman's mental capacity. One thing he did shortly after taking office, though, was to bring in a youngster who graduated from Amherst only last year and place him in a position of responsibility above those who had been in the bureau for years. The youngster had no experience whatsoever. That may be intelligent executive action, but my book on "How to Be an Intelligent Executive" says it is not.

There was another instance in the bureau, too, of a youngster whose father has some connections on Capitol Hill. This youngster sold the doctor on the idea that he could throw these connections behind the doctor's confirmation. The youngster's salary was raised. That, according to my book, does not come under the title of being an intelligent executive, but is dealt with in a chapter devoted to office politics.

* * * *

Maybe I am lacking in idealism but my sympathies have been with Jim Farley and the Democrats on the hill in their efforts to get deserving members of their faith into some of these jobs hereabouts. I agree with them that one does not have to be a Republican or even a professor to be capable or intelligent. Concerning the attitude of the professors they should realize that we've always had a number of very erudite gentlemen with us. George Moses could give any of them cards and spades on the subject of Greek. Neither can I accept the attitude that the appointment of a Democrat is political while the appointment of a Republican is not. They are all, with very few exceptions, political selections.

* * * *

One of the funniest jokes is to look upon Jim Farley as a politician but to accept Mr. Ickes as just a disinterested public servant. Mr. Ickes is a politician—not a Democratic one, but a Progressive one. When it is said he is running his department on a nonpartisan basis I think what really is meant is that he is death to Democrats, that he leans to Progressive Republicans instead. He has surrounded himself with a bunch of political "outs" that have been around here for the last 14 years.

The situation in a nutshell is that Mr. Roosevelt rightly thinks there are not enough Democrats in the country to keep a party in office. He wants to absorb the Progressives, to make it a Democratic-Progressive party. To this end he gives some appointments to the Democrats, some to the Progressives. It is doubtful whether he will succeed with his consolidated party project. Mr. Hoover, for some reason or other, thought he could build up the Republican party in the South.

But regardless of the outcome, the appointments, by and large, are political. The appointment of the head professor, Rex Tugwell, was a play to the Progressives even though the President felt obligated to him. He worked in the campaign.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF MR. INSULL.

Q. Mr. Insull, do you admit that you took from June, 1932, to May, 1934, to make a round trip across the Atlantic?

A. I do.

Q. Are you aware that this affords you excellent grounds for a plea of insanity?

A. I hadn't thought of that, but I see your point.

Q. Furthermore, do you or do you not admit that in traveling from Smyrna to New York you made the entire trip by slow boat and took nearly a month to cover the distance?

A. I admit it, but ask that it will not be held against me.

Q. Are you a lover of the sea?

A. Yes, but nobody loves it quite that much except Masefield.

* * * *

Q. Mr. Insull, why did you flee the country?

A. I did not flee the country; everybody was so mixed up and so excited at the time that neither I nor any other man was sure which way he was going.

Q. Why didn't you ask the captain of the ship?

A. He has been in the stock market, too, and didn't have his bearings.

* * * *

Q. When you reached Greece why did you plan on taking out Greek citizenship papers and living there?

A. When I reached Greece the conditions in America were such that I was looking for distance rather than direction.

* * * *

Q. You have been quoted as saying that you made mistakes as a financier, but that they were honest errors of judgment?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did that include the attempt to get on shipboard in female attire?

A. I had to put on dresses.

Q. Why?

A. My lawyers had taken my pants.

* * * *

Q. Mr. Insull, will you explain just what happened to your financial empire that caused it to crash?

A. All I know was that my securities kept tumbling and I found myself vulnerable, as they say in bridge.

Q. What system were you playing, Culbertson or Lenz?

A. All I know was that the rule was to cover a corporation with a corporation.

Q. What happened?

A. After playing my cards to the limit I discovered I had been "dummy."

* * * *

Q. Mr. Insull, what is your attitude with regard to these criminal proceedings against you?

A. I think I have been punished enough.

Q. How so?

A. If you'd been on those small time steamships in rough weather as long as I have you wouldn't ask such an absurd question.

A MARKET INTERPRETATION.

"Insull Collapses." — headline. Maybe it is more of a technical reaction improving the general situation.

Mr. Insull asked for a private room in the Illinois hoosegow, but was sternly told that he would have to be satisfied with a cell from which he could escape easily like anybody else.

Probably the grand jury exonerating Mr. Mellon felt that under present conditions in this country, no matter what a man has paid in taxes he has been socked enough.

"Two Youths Slug Grandmother to Go on a Spree."—headline. Yoo hoo, Mr. Hays!

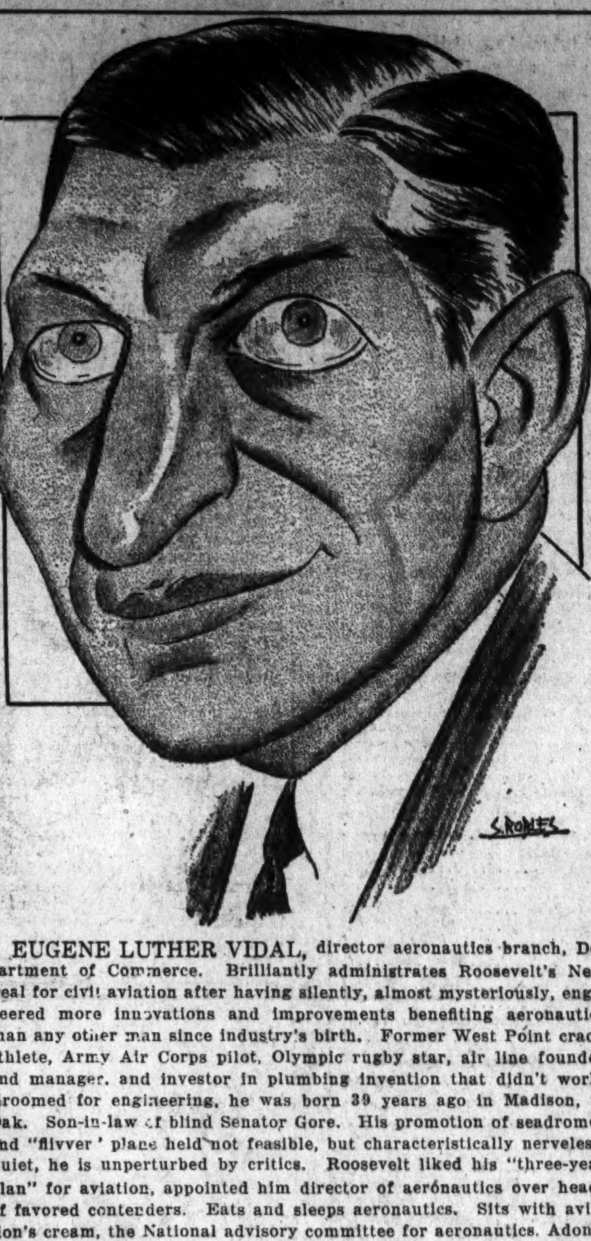
The National Gallery



EUGENE LUTHER VIDAL, director aeronautics branch, Department of Commerce. Brilliantly administrates Roosevelt's New Deal for civil aviation after having silently, almost mysteriously, engineered more innovations and improvements benefiting aeronautics than any other man since industry's birth. Former West Point crack athlete, Army Air Corps pilot, Olympic rugby star, air line founder and manager, and investor in plumbing invention that didn't work. Groomed for engineering, he was born 39 years ago in Madison, S. Dak. Son-in-law of blind Senator Gore. His promotion of seadromes and "flivver" plane held not feasible, but characteristically nerveless, quiet, he is unperturbed by critics. Roosevelt liked his "three-year plan" for aviation, appointed him director of aerónautics over heads of favored contenders. Eats and sleeps aeronautics. Sits with aviation's cream, the National advisory committee for aeronautics. Adonis physique. Brawny, looks like an Indian. Carries only toothbrush when traveling. Lithe, cat-like walk. Admired by colleagues. Likes to eat wild duck and fly own plane into nearby hayfields.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

The Lion Shouldn't Boast When He Overcomes a Rabbit

By Robert Quillen

When Alexander's thirty thousand whipped a million Persians, they won the greatest victory in military history. It was a triumph to satisfy any man's thirst for glory. It was a feat to justify endless boasting.

But suppose the million Persians had defeated Alexander. Would that have been a great achievement? History would have told the story in one paragraph, if at all

What is the significance of any victory—in football, a prize fight, a game of cards?

It means that a superior has defeated an inferior. Is that remarkable?

When a football team from some great university defeats a small-college team, sport pages make no mention of the game's unfairness. But what does it prove, except that 40 athletes can defeat 16?

A man who is larger or stronger or better trained than others is boastfully or secretly proud of his ability to whip any of his fellows. But his pride does small credit to his sportsmanship.

Would Jack Dempsey boast of his ability to knock down a midget? Or would any man feel proud of his ability to whip a child? When a big man beats a small one, he merely demonstrates a willingness to abuse his strength.

Any weak and craven outcast can do as much. Given an opponent weaker than himself, he also can be a victor.

Why gloat over any victory? The fact that you win is proof of your superiority, and how can a superior fail to win?

If your opponent is superior, he wins. If you are exactly equal, the match is a tie. The victory of either settles the question of superiority, if there is a question, but when all is done the net result is proof that four is greater than two.

Delight in conflict and rejoicing in victory came down to us from jungle ancestors to whom victory meant life and defeat death.

Vanity still delights in being "better" than the other fellow—smarter, richer, socially superior—but a whole man who is generous does not gloat over a cripple.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

James Whitcomb Riley and Henry James.

It would be difficult to think of two American men of letters more unlike this pair. I believe they met but once, and I am sure Riley never forgot the occasion. In one of the early years of our century Henry James traveled around the United States delivering a lecture on English speech; and I almost wish he had never written the resulting book, or at any rate that he had not called it "The American Scene"—as that particular phrase has become so shopworn as to be nauseating.

Well, on one occasion he lectured at Indianapolis; and of course everyone who lectured in that town was invited to meet its chief celebrity, the National poet, James Whitcomb Riley. I doubt if Riley heard him, for he had the very natural custom of never going to any lectures but his own. However, Meredith Nicholson brought the two together at lunch, with no one except their host present. It was a severe ordeal for all three.

Riley had often vainly tried to read the books of Henry James, and Mr. James had never tried to read the books of Riley. At the luncheon the great novelist began a monologue. Now, it was a wonderful thing to hear Henry James in conversation, but it took time. Some one said wittily that his conversation sounded like reading proof. He would hesitate (like "Sentimental Tommy") in a long attempt to find the precise word he wanted; and if he could not find it, he would change the subject rather than use an inferior noun or verb. He went on talking, and Riley never got a chance, but listened with nervous excitement to see if the satisfactory word would finally come.

As James was describing some woman he had met, he said, "She had two beautiful eyes"—and then paused. Riley thereupon said: "They usually come in pairs," which was his first and last contribution to the conversation. Mr. James said nothing, but looked at Riley; he subjected Riley to such a prolonged and intense scrutiny that the poet suffered tortures. Mr. James did not look at him angrily or contemptuously, but in sincere bewilderment.

Mr. Nicholson on another occasion was lunching alone with Riley in a restaurant when they were joined by an eager, pushful young man, who poured out a torrent of words, with no pause at all. Finally Riley said he must be going; and he and Nicholson walked down the street in absolute silence. After about ten minutes Riley broke the silence by saying, "What is the name of your young friend?" Meredith told him and Riley said, as if thinking aloud, the one word "reticent."

Drug Store Clerk Freed in Rum Sale

Danville, Va., May 10 (Spl.).—Selden Lewis, drug store clerk, was free today after a jury in corporation court decided he did not sell whisky to R. W. Rorley without a prescription.

Lewis had been convicted in police court and sentenced to a jail term and fine. He appealed, insisting he had been wrongly identified.

Originally Haskins McFall, owner of the drug store, had been fined and ordered to jail by a police magistrate, but the case was reopened when McFall insisted he had been called as a witness and not as a defendant. At the second hearing he was acquitted and the charge shifted to Lewis. Lewis proved he could not have access to the liquor supply.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

THOMAS CRAVEN once met a formidable old gentleman in Oregon who had been an Indian fighter and a sheep rancher, who had visited Africa while Matisse was there, and who knew a thing or two about art. "Why is it," asked this doughty old Westerner, "that our artists can discover nothing in America worth painting? Why do they everlastingly paint studies and not real things? And why, in the name of the God, do they kow-tow to the French?"

THEO. HALL.

You may take these questions as the text of Thomas Craven's vast and vigorous polemic—"Modern Art" (Simon & Schuster, $3.75). For Mr. Craven, writing with an ink which eats away a thousand falsities and petty pretensions in the realm of painting, urges us manfully toward a vital and independent American art concerned with living people and living problems. That purpose sounds axiomatic, even trite; but how far it is removed from our present attainment only a reading of this book will show. With the pungency of Joseph Pennell, with the morality of Irving Babbitt, and with a breadth and balance all his own, Mr. Craven charges into the fray. He comes out, to be sure, a little sour.

"It would be a fine thing," he writes at the end of the book, "if we had in America a dominant idealism, a spiritual force uniting artists in a common purpose. * * * But I see no signs of the coming of this Utopia. In the absence of a Utopian scheme, the artist must adapt himself to realities, put living above painting, and do his best in the worst of worlds." That, may I say at once, is the only tired note in a brave book—a book which is as open-eyed, constructive, and important in its field as our friend Mr. Mumford's is in technics. Close readers of this column will see that I can offer little more in praise.

Half the book devotes itself largely to French painting of the last 75 years; the rest takes up recent art in America. Mr. Craven deals in "isms" only so far as they come out of particular men in particular environments. He despises the abstract in painting; the book proves he despises it just as much in criticism. Anecdotes, personal reminiscences, violent invective and equally violent approbation—all these overflow from the pages. Exasperation makes him hot-minded, but I don't blame him.

His opinion of the artists' bohemia in Paris fairly sears the leaves. This quotation of summary is comparatively mild: "If one must go to Paris, it is well to go when one is young and susceptible to the fabricated glamor of a prearranged setting. To remain there is a confession of indolence and incapacity; to acknowledge no laws of growth and development; to prolong the gasconading antics of youth into a fixed state of routine pretension." We see in most modern art "the deadly curse of this Bohemia—that it transforms the artist into the stereotype."

You can catch his regard for French esthetics in this passage: "French taste, in essence, consists in putting ugly things together with distinction. With a row of consumptive trees, a little gravel, a few nude statues and a strumpet, the French make a boulevard that fetches the world."

Or for the leading school of French painting in this: "The history of Impressionism is the story of the errant struggles of an art that had lost its function, of the path of painting from the church and the public to the dealer and the museum." That is the crux of his arraignment of most modern painting—it has lost touch with normal life and society and moved into the dim closets of the dilettantes.

* * * *

Even more interesting are Mr. Craven's hits at the artists themselves. "Matisse, rising from a hack copyist to the wildest of the wild animals . . . Derain, a manufacturer; Van Dougen, a pander in the newfangled style, and Picasso, a compositor," for example.

Toward the sly, conscious abstractions of the last he is especially opposed. Among many passages, here is one I've chosen for its connection with "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas:" "Whenever Picasso tackles a real problem in art, his failure is monumental. Years ago, when he was on the climb, he attempted a portrait of Gertrude Stein. That uncouth spinster was collecting geniuses and he was willing to be collected. She professed to admire his pictures and was patronizing him for all there was in it. He had never drawn from life and was ignorant of the structure of the head; but he pegged away at the job for nearly a year and finally called it finished. And there it is, a lifeless old squaw; something between the living and the dead; the celebrated carcass of Stein!"

But if you think there is no proportion or tenderness in Mr. Craven, you must read his fine chapter on Van Gogh, or his passages on that pathetic youth Modigliani, or his reverent words for buoyant old Renoir.

And if you doubt his capacity for admiration and hope, you must consider his praises of George Grey Barnard, Frank Lloyd Wright, John Curry and Reginald Marsh, and his specific expectation of a freshened art from the practice and influence of Thomas H. Benton, George Grosz, Diego Rivera, and Jose Clemente Orozco. But the most hopeful sign of all, as he says, is that "art is beginning to engage the attention of large groups of people who, for a long time, have taken no interest in art for the very good reason that art has taken no interest in them."

If there was ever a book to help that mutual understanding, Mr. Craven has given it to us here.

Radio Waves and Ripples

"PULEEZE, gentlemen, the microphone!"

If something like that comes to your loudspeaker during a broadcast of one of Joe Turner's Thursday night wrestling shows, it won't be because Mr. Turner and WJSV are afraid the grunt and groan boys are going to start breaking things, mostly expensive equipment. It will simply be because the grunt and groan boys sometimes emit other noises, far more articulate and much less polite noises, the rudest epithets, in brief, and radio, as we all know, is expected at all times to be as pure as one of Mr. Will Hays' most sanitary cinemas.

And a WJSV microphone hangs right over the grunt and groan boys' heads. WJSV wants it distinctly understood, however, that it hangs there to pick up the ringside color, the grunts and groans and the fans' yelping for their favorite approach to mayhem, but not too much color.

Incidentally, WJSV changed its mind at the last minute, with a little persuasion from Mr. Turner, and decided to appoint N. B. C.'s Jim McGrath its chief purveyor of grunts and groans. He started last night.

Three times Anton Lang has played Christ in the famed Oberammergau Passion Play.

This year—Friday, May 18—he opens the play's 300th anniversary performance by speaking the prologue.

If Anton Lang feels any disappointment over his relegation to an apparently minor role, the National Broadcasting Company probably has more than made up for this seeming omission by arranging for him to talk, via short wave radio, with his son, Anton Lang, jr., an instructor in German and literature at Georgetown University. Their conversation will open the first of two exclusive N. B. C. Oberammergau broadcasts Sunday at 1 p. m.

The younger Anton will speak from WRC's studios here, his father the little village in the Bavarian Alps.

WITH programs coming from the Byrd expedition just about bath time every Saturday night and with the admiral himself opening the World's Fair from a point 200 miles farther down the Antarctic icecap, Columbia, no doubt, will establish, as its press department says it will, some kind of a record when it picks up the first broadcast of the new Vadso (Norway) station Thursday. But what kind of a record?

Columbia says it's a record of having staged pick-ups from the earth's northernmost and southernmost broadcasting points within the year.

ROSA PONSELLE turns one of our loveliest soprano voices over to cigarette company promotion once a week on C. B. S.

But we are at least equally impressed by the measures C. B. S. is taking to get the broadcast to New York. The program—a medley of Vadso fishermen folk songs—will travel first by air to Oslo, thence from the master-control of the Norsk Rikskringkasting—Norwegian for Norwegian Broadcasting Co.—by land to Berlin, and thence across the Atlantic by short waves.

Editor's note:

Vadso is a fishing port in Finmark, the northernmost province in Europe. It is in bleak, mountainous country, covered with snow three-fourths of the year and enjoying but six weeks of summer. The plains are inhabited by Lapps, who lead nomadic lives. At the bottom of the fjords, which are washed quite regularly by the Gulf Stream, the Norwegians fish for salmon and cultivate cattle.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Grandpa Bear as Teacher.

That night after Jocko Monkey caught such a big turtle, Bettie Bear wasn't in a very good humor for, because they didn't have anything else, she had to cook rabbit again. They all wanted to pacify her the best they could, for they didn't want her to quit cooking, as she had threatened to do that afternoon. So they were all mighty nice and pleasant, and Jocko even went in and helped her wash the dishes. When she came in from the kitchen, Grandpa Bear was just starting to tell a story about something that happned away out West before he came to Lake Bettie.

"You boys think you have a hard time out here, with Mr. Man and Uncle Joe after you, but you don't know anything about real trouble. You ought to have a mountain lion to get after you once. They are little fellows—not as big as Dr. Coon, some of them—but they can make about the worst fight you ever saw. I have seen them jump down off of a rock onto a horse or a cow or a deer and cut his throat with his sharp teeth almost as quick as Jocko can shoot the gun. And they kill bears, too. I have had to hide from them many a time, and once I came mighty near getting caught.

"It was one ugly rainy day away out in the Rocky Mountains, and I had been out hunting for a mountain goat. It was getting along late in the afternoon and I was about to give up and go home without any dinner. Then I saw a big, rough rock standing right on the edge of a mountain, and on the other side of it was a great deep gulch that looked like it was about a mile deep. I didn't want to take any risk of having a goat butt me off down into that awful place, and so I climbed up a tree that stood right close to the rock, so I could look over and see if there was a goat hidden there. The tree wasn't very large—just about as big as Dr. Coon's neck—and by the time I got high enough to see over into the pile of rocks it was beginning to bend and wiggle about. But I held on good and looked over the rocks. Was there a goat there? No, but there was something a million times worse. The biggest mountain lion I ever saw was just waking up and stretching himself. Just as I started to run down the tree and scoot for home he saw me and he made a jump for my tree. There wasn't anything for me to do but to keep climbing, and so I climbed around on the side away from the gulch, and the tree began to bend over toward the ground. I kept climbing, and so did the lion, and the tree kept bending farther and farther toward the ground. Now you know I am about as heavy as half a dozen mountain lions, and a tree that would bend away over with me would stand straight up with anything but the lion on it. So when the tree had bent away over so it wasn't far from the ground, I turned loose and dropped down. I never knew before that a mountain lion could fly, but that one certainly could. When I turned the tree loose there wasn't much weight left on it, and so it flew back straight up, and it threw that lion clear back over all the rocks and down into that awful gulch. I ran to the edge to see him fall, and he was flying out in the air like a rainbow, and it looked to me like he fell about a mile before he struck the rocks away down below. Well, I went back and hugged that tree for saving my life, and then I skeedadled for home. Yes, you boys have an easy time getting your living, and you ought to be happy."

Ample supplies of fully matured whiskies are now available and the present high standard of quality will be strictly maintained. White Horse has a subtle and distinctive aroma. It is soft, smooth and very pleasing to the taste. Horse Show Rained Out, Carries On

Storm Scatters Crowds After Successful Opening.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The National Capital Horse Show, which opened with a fine flourish at Bradley Farms, Md., yesterday morning, closed out the first day in a deluge of spring rain that sent spectators scurrying for shelter; but Capital society, dampened but undaunted, anticipates the second day of the three-day show with increased interest today and hopes for better weather.

Blue skies, rolling hills and a grand stand filled with a gay and fashionable crowd provided a colorful setting for a most auspicious opening for the show in the morning.

The drenching rain about 3 o'clock ended the show for the day so far as the spectators were concerned. As the rain abated some of the classes were finished, and a few hardy onlookers remained for the late afternoon events.

Morning Program.

The morning program was a great success. The children's classes were run off and luncheon was served out of doors by members of the Junior League costumed in green smocks worn over bright summer frocks. Mrs. David Barry, jr., is chairman of the luncheon committee. She is assisted by Mrs. Robert Watson, Mrs. Andrew Saul, Mrs. Daniel Borden, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Mrs. David Finley, Mrs. Reeve Hoover, and Mrs. J. Blaise de Sibour.

The show will be resumed today, starting with the classes which were not shown yesterday and continuing the second day program until the late afternoon. Tomorrow afternoon will find the largest crowd of the show gathered to see the final awarding of trophies.

Fifty boxes have been taken for the three-day period, Mrs. Lewis W. Douglas, wife of the Director of the Budget, has announced. Representatives of the Governments of Great Britain, Italy, France, Germany, Russia, Rumania and the Netherlands have reserved boxes.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull were the guests of honor at a delightful musicale given Wednesday evening by the State Department Club in the Chamber of Commerce building. Mr. Reinald Werrenrath, barytone, gave a program of old and new songs. "The Last Round-Up" was sung at the request of the Secretary. Mr. Werrenrath explained that was the first time he ever had sung it.

The Secretary and Mrs. Hull, the latter wearing a lovely gown of ice blue satin with a jacket trimmed with mink, chatted for a while with the guests in the patio.

Secretary and Mrs. Hull were accompanied by the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips and the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr.

Mrs. Werrenrath was present, wearing a frock of cream-colored chiffon with the bodice embroidered with turquoise beads, and her brother-in-law and twin sister, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Mrs. Roosevelt will return to Washington this morning after having spent several days in New York.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at luncheon in the White House today in honor of the former United States Ambassador to Turkey and Mrs. Abram Elkus.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, was the guest in whose honor Mme. Alma Clayburgh entertained at the Ritz Tower in New York at luncheon yesterday. The luncheon preceded a meeting of the committee of the National Navy Club in charge of the Navy Ball to be given June 11 in the Hotel Commodore in honor of the men of the fleet, which is expected to arrive in New York the end of this month.

Mrs. Roosevelt presided at the meeting following the luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, son and daughter-in-law of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, will spend the week-end in Cleveland, where they will be the guests of Mrs. James Roosevelt's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Crowell. Tomorrow they will attend the dedication of the new therapy pool at the Rainbow Hospital for Crippled Children, which will be known as the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Pool.

Exhausted Feet Make Unlovely, Drawn Faces

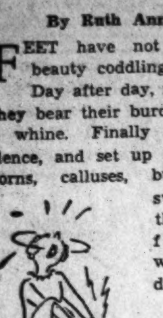
By Ruth Anne Davis

FEET have not received the beauty coddling they deserve. Day after day, mile after mile they bear their burden with never a whine. Finally they lose patience, and set up a clamor with corns, calluses, burnings, and swellings. With the result the face becomes wan, tired, and drawn.



Now warm weather is on the way and feet are beginning to complain, see to it they are kept as comfortable as possible.

There are four sure steps in doing this. The result is infallible foot comfort.

At night bathe the feet in warm water, then massage in a certain foot ice. Rub this in from the toes to the ankles. It is a medicated salve that cools and quells pain, and reduces swelling.

After the morning bath smooth a cuticle softener over corns and calluses. This softens the hard crusts so they may be removed with no trouble.

Now for the special deodorizer that keeps the feet as fresh as new mown hay.

One last step and they're ready for the day. To prevent the shoes from sticking and to keep the feet completely comfortable sprinkle a little talcum into your stockings.

Women who plan a whole day's shopping, or are forced to stand on their feet long hours at a time, will find they can safeguard the beauty of their faces, by first of all caring for their feet.

• • • •

Non-Wrinkle, Non-Slip.

There are a great many people who like to play bridge on a bare table top. But these are the ones who have had sad experiences with covers that wrinkle and slip. There are numerous hostesses who prefer to cover their tables to safeguard them against scratches and scars or else to hide those already there.

Ideal table covers—Proof against bulges, and fine protectors—may be purchased at a large department store.

Their fine quality of moire gives them a sleek smooth finish. The three letter monogram in the corner gives an attractive touch. Covers are available in red, maroon, brown, and green.

• • • •

Only Two Days.

Today and tomorrow are last days for Mother's Day shopping. An F street store is making it easy with several sensible gift suggestions.

One is a black moire occasional purse, the thing for teas, parties, and afternoon calls. A splendid buy for $1.25.

There's a box of four shoe bags. In view of the summer trip, this is an ideal suggestion. They enable one to pack shoes compactly; they prevent them from soiling the other contents of the valise.

• • • •

Compact Compacts.

Compacts, little more than an inch square, deserve special attention. One thing sure, these featherweights would never clutter up a purse or weigh it down. They may be tucked in a small evening purse or carried in the escort's vest pocket conveniently.

They contain a fine grade of subtly scented powder with unusual lasting qualities. And they sell for 50 cents.

• • • •

Fool Your Public.

Many an old dress has been made to look like new by the addition of new collars and cuffs. But some shoppers hesitate to spend a great deal on a last year's frock, and are anxious to find neat, trim sets at a conservative price.

Let them stop by the neckwear department of a local shop. There are collars and cuffs here for any and every occasion.

Net collars with round or V necks give a flattering touch to both face and frock. Some of these are a mass of petal points in peach or white. Others are row after row of ruffling in red and write or blue and white.

Striped organdies run the gamut of the color scheme. They make jaunty trimmings for dainty summer dresses.

The severity of white piques is relieved by inserts and borders of Irish lace. Consider these carefully. There is generally a frock in every woman's wardrobe which needs just this in-between type of trimming.

• • • •

Dainty Dimity Gowns.

At first glance the dimity gowns on sale in an F street shop look like old-fashioned dresses. The skirts are unusually full and flowing, the necks cut in either V's or squares, and the shoulder straps disguised as sleeves with a row of tiny shoulder ruffles.

• • • •

Often it's hard to find the right kind of vase for small miscellaneous flowers. But some small Italian pottery baskets are just the things. These are daintily trimmed in blue and gold around the sides and across the top of the arched handle. Violets, daisies, forget-me-nots, clover blooms or any small field spray would suit them to a T.

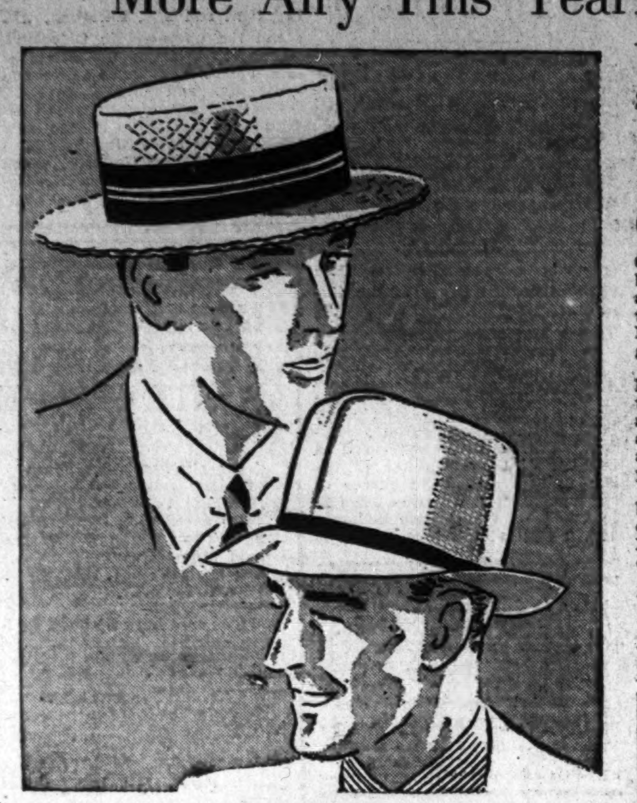
Panamas and Sennits More Airy This Year



By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Every year, in every way, straw hats get cooler and cooler. And this year is not the exception which usually proves the rule.

Take the sennit first. Because it will be first in any check-up of hats men wear this summer. And here are six good reasons why 60 men of every 100 will clap it onto their heads on May 15.

Air-Cooled.

First, it is air-cooled through its open, porously woven straw. Second, it is ventilated through a specially woven air-duct band.

Third, it is lightweight. Some of them practically featherweight. And finished off with light bands and linings.

Next, it is easy on the head. It is high-crowned enough to clear the head top and bathe it in air. It doesn't bear down on the skull.

Fifth, it is sun-shading. Broad brimmed enough to shade the eyes and cool-shadow the face. But not too wide for medium sized and short men to wear.

And last, it is comfortably fitted. Its spongy woven brim and sweat-proof band are 100 per cent head-conforming.

In addition to all this the sennit . . . so these sixty men of each hundred will tell you . . . is good-looking. Both off and on.

This year it will be brighter, too, than it has been in previous years, because more men are wearing fancy hat bands. Stripes, particularly. In colors which are bright yet neat. Blue-and-red, black-and-yellow, black-and-blue, just for examples.

That's the sennit. And then there's the Panama. The hat which gets the votes of twenty-five of every hundred men.

Easy-Sitting.

Easy lies the head that wears it, for here is one sure-fire way to be light-headed without being giddy.

Most Panamas weigh a scant three ounces. They have all the soft comfort of your favorite felt hat.

Men who wear a Panama also like its crispness, its brisk and chipper shapeliness. And what's more, they like the idea of a hat which can be worn with practically any suit, day or evening. And the Panama can.

It accommodates itself to your preference for either a snap-up or snap-down brim. And if you go rumble-seating about the country you'll find it will stick as close to your head as your hair.

Men's headgear of the type described may be found in all the better class men's wear shops and department stores in Washington.

Hot Salad Dressings Sound Strange, But They Give Delicious Flavor to Warm Dishes If They've Been Mixed in Sauces.

By Susan Mills.

EVER HEAR OF SERVING hot salad dressing? Don't confuse cooked dressing with a warm mayonnaise mixture or French dressing. The idea of serving hot dressings that are usually served cold may seem queer, but they add a definitely delicious flavor to many foods, and give grace and interest to warm dishes.

Here are two recipes for these often used dressings.

French Dressing

Mix 1-4 teaspoon of cloves, 1-4 teaspoon of cinnamon, 1 1-2 teaspoons of salt, 2 teaspoons of paprika, 1-2 teaspoon of celery salt, and 3 teaspoons of sugar in a bowl, adding 1 cup of salad oil and 1-3 cup of vinegar or lemon juice slowly as the beating progresses. A small sliver of garlic added to the mixture will add zest to the dressing.

Mayonnaise Dressing

Mix 1-2 teaspoon of salt, 1-2 to 1 teaspoon of mustard, 1-4 teaspoon of paprika, 1-2 teaspoon of powdered sugar (optional), add 1 tablespoon of lemon juice and 1 1-2 tablespoons of vinegar, and mix thoroughly. Add 1 egg, unbeaten. Then slowly add 2 cups of salad oil, a tablespoon at a time, beating vigorously between each addition of the oil. When 1-3 cup of oil has been added, the mixture will have begun to thicken and the oil can be added more rapidly.

A little experience and you will know at just what rate to add the oil. The more oil you use, the thicker will be the mayonnaise.

When all the oil has been added, the dressing should be thick enough to hold its shape. If it is not, add a little more oil. If too thick, it can be thinned with lemon juice, or vinegar. For a richer dressing use 2 egg yolks instead of 1 egg. One may be hard cooked or crushed.

Omit mustard if dressing is to be used for fruit salad.

If the mixture should curdle, take a fresh, cold bowl, break in fresh egg yolk, and add the curdled mixture to it, beating as before.

Beating should not be irregular or intermittent.

When making chicken a la king, for each 2 cups of cream sauce add ½ cup of mayonnaise. Make the sauce, add the chicken. Heat the two together, then add the mayonnaise and pimiento and serve at once.

Hollandaise Substitute.

Everyone appreciates fresh spring vegetables served with Hollandaise sauce. Hollandaise is hard to make (even French chefs admit the fact) and if you feel you dare not attempt it, try this. Cook the broccoli, the cauliflower, or the asparagus until tender. Then just before serving pour over it 1 cup of white sauce to which you have added ¼ cup of mayonnaise. The yellow sauce is good to look at as its smooooth richness spreads over the vegetables, and you will like the flavor.

What about hot potato salad? Put the onion, crisped bacon, and hot cubed potatoes together. Then pour over this combination hot French dressing. You homemakers will probably think of other delicious uses for hot dressings, but here's your start.

Hot Tartar Sauce.

1 tablespoon each capers, cucumber pickles, olives, parsley and grated onion. 1 cup of mayonnaise. Heat and serve on fish or smoked meats.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

If May 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 a. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 7:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 10:30 to 11:30 p. m.

If you are a woman and this is your natal day, the mail should bring you some agreeable news.

The child born on May 11 will, as it grows up, prove a continuous source of gratification for its family. Being of a very generous character, it may impulsively do things that are rather startling at first, but when the motive that has prompted them is understood they will meet with approval. This child has a most promising career ahead of it.

If a man, and born on May 11, you have sufficient nerve not to be afraid to back your own judgment. This will make you successful in any new enterprises if they are of a legitimate nature, provided, however, you do not attempt something you know nothing about. Love will prove a powerful factor in your life. You should cultivate the friendship of some men slightly older than yourself, for they may be in a position to prove of great help in advancing your interests.

People, if they will act on their own initiative on this date in business transactions, will have gratifying results. This is an unusually propitious day for making calls, renewing old friendships, and patching up misunderstandings. Let a good, firm, hearty handshake be indicative that there is strength of character in your make-up. A flabby, weak hand, without a responsive grip in it, causes a lack of confidence.

G. O. P. Women Hear Senator Hit New Deal

Speaker Predicts Downfall of Nation if Present System Continues.

COMPARING President Roosevelt to Confucius, whose attempt to regulate industry in China caused that country to lag behind the world in progress, Senator Lester Dickinson, of Iowa, yesterday predicted the downfall of the Natoin if the present system of government continued.

In his address to members of the League of Republican Women at their fifth political institute, Senator Dickinson took a staunch stand against the NRA, "all other such alphabetical arrangements," and especially against delegation of power.

The Senator concluded his address by appealing for a return to the old and tried ways of Government. He demanded the Government stay out of business.

"The Democratic party says to all who are suffering, 'come and lay your troubles on the White House steps.' But I say we should say 'go home and take care of your own troubles.' "

Culbertson on Bridge

DOWN 1400!

The heaviest losses at the Bridge table are unquestionably due to overbidding.

In a recent Rubber game at Crockford's Club, New York, I saw a partnership, through failure to draw the correct inferences, utterly fail to reach a makable game contract and, on the contrary, reach another game contract at which they went down 1,400 points. Most of the errors of omission and commission unquestionably are chargeable to the eventual Declarer. The hand and bidding were:

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North:
♠ A J 5
◇ J 9 8 5 4
♣ A 8 6 3

West:
♠ Q 10
♡ K J 9 7 4
◇ A Q
♣ Q J 9 2

East:
♠ 6 4 3 2
♡ 8 6 5
♣ K 10 7 4

South:
♠ K 9 8 7
♡ A Q 10 3
◇ K 10 7 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	2◇	Pass
2♠	Pass	2NT	Pass
3◇	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

South's justification for his Opening bid was the very fine 4-4-4-1 distribution of the hand. His partner's response of two diamonds came as a matter of course, but South's Rebid of two spades was very bad. It not only misled North as to the strength of the hand, but the distribution as well. Predicated upon this bid, North's two-notrump bid was correct. When South, however, bid three diamonds, North should have taken this bid as a warning not to bid notrump unless the club suit was under perfect control. The later Double by West was unwise, as it afforded to the North and South players an opportunity to rescue themselves from a bad contract. However, North reasoned that South had two fine suits, hearts and spades; that the assist of the diamonds could well show top cards in that suit, although it would stop the suit only once, so he decided to let bad enough alone. When the question was passed around to South, he reasoned that his partner must have understood his message and that certainly North must be prepared for an Opening lead of clubs or for a shift to that suit after an Opening heart lead, so he also passed.

The hand probably was misplayed, but the result was that North and South went down four tricks—1,400 points—and the Gods of Distribution, as though to add insult to injury, presented their opponents with a Small Slam, which was made laid down, on the very next hand. The cost of the misbid and misplay was close to 3,000 points, as North and South, as the cards lie, can easily make five diamonds.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Indian Bones and Joints.

There is nothing new about arthritis of the spine. The Indians had it hundreds, if not thousands, of years ago.

Near Lewistown, Ill., there are Indian mounds in which it is roughly guessed there are several thousand skeletons of Indians. When these Indians lived no man knows, for there is no record.

However, studies of the thousands of bones found there tell us something of the bone and joint diseases to which Indians were subject hundreds or thousands of years ago.

The evidence supplied by these skeletons deals a hard blow to some theories advanced by some dentists. The teeth prove that the Indians had to chew hard foods. The teeth were ground down just as we find teeth in corn-eating horses. The enamel and much of the dentine were worn away on the grinding surfaces. In spite of that, this surface was hard and highly polished. There are those who hold to the theory that our teeth are poor and irregular because we eat soft foods. These Indians ground their teeth on hard foods, yet these skeletons prove that Indians had every tooth disease that modern man suffers from. As a rule the Indian had good teeth, but there is ample evidence of exceptions.

I WAS A SPY!

By MARTHE McKENNA

What Happened Thus Far.

Marthe Cnockaert McKenna, a Belgian who served as a British secret agent during the war, in previous installments told of her service as a nurse in a German military hospital—and of aiding the Allies at the same time. She caused the destruction of a German munitions train after surreptitiously reading a notation in a notebook of a German officer who flirted with her. She discovers a German officer, billeted at her father's cafe, is a German espionage agent. She learns that the Kaiser is going to visit Roulers, and takes a trip to Brussels with a German colonel. Fleeing from him, she returns and carries a message that the Kaiser is on his way to Roulers, with the expectation that the allies will seek to kill him. The Kaiser calls off his trip.

IN the autumn Canteen Ma brought a warning from over the frontier—"Take care—counter-espionage being tightened up throughout area. Trust no one."

The warning about counter-espionage was all very well, but what could one do? Nothing except hope for the best, for Heaven knows one was careful enough already. Two civilians had been arrested as spies in the town only a fortnight before. They were clients of our cafe—a well-to-do middle-aged man and his sister—but I had had no idea that they were spies and the secret friends of escaping prisoners until the story of their arrest spread round Roulers.

We were busy at the hospital that night till nearly 9 o'clock, but in case I might be watched I decided to go straight home and not to deliver my message about the troops in the brewery to No. 63 until later. Actually it was nearly midnight when I slipped past the police patrols and came to the silent alleyway. I was just about to give my usual curious sequence of taps when I heard footfalls in the street; steps which came nearer and then stopped.

Crouches in Shadow.

Like a flash I was at the far end of the paved court, crouching in the shadow. My heart thudded in my throat. Had I been followed—discovered? I felt my message about the brewery burning against my breast. Had I time to destroy it before they arrested me? Then soft footsteps came down the alleyway toward me and halted just outside the fifth window. It occurred to me as I pressed myself into the shadows that here was another secret agent who had used the same "mail bag."

A dark form outlined itself against the night, then quite distinctly I heard the same sequence of taps on the glass that I myself gave. Almost I came out of my hiding place to see who it could be. It was well that I did not. The window slid softly upward, without noise, as so often it had slid upward for me. A hand came out from the darkness within, white, outstretched. Then the most amazing thing happened. The shadowy figure pulled something from its belt, there was an infinitesimal pause, then a red glare slashed the night, followed by a crash that echoed and reechoed from the inclosing walls. There came a strangled sob, a horrible scream and then a thud. The figure pushed the window up further and climbed in. For long minutes I crouched with cold fear at my heart. No. 63 had been discovered. No. 63 was now dead. Maybe tomorrow I, too, should be facing the black muzzles of rifles. That was the penalty of espionage. By a superhuman effort and bending low, I slid past that window of death and crept into the street, shaking in every limb. Ten minutes later I was secure in my own bedroom, wiping the sweat of terror from my face. It had been the worst moment in my whole career.

In the morning my mother remarked that I had not slept well. It was true. I had not closed my eyes. Then I told her everything.

"Courage," she whispered. "Maybe Canteen Ma will be in the place today. Give me the message, and if I see her I will contrive to slip it into her hand. There will have to be a new line of communication for you."

She had more courage than I, that mother of mine. I went to the hospital expecting each moment a hand to fall on my shoulder. But there was no sign. Apparently I was unsuspected still. Yet in that lower room in the silent alley at this moment, No. 63 was lying cold and stiff with a ragged wound in the head. It seemed to me that morning that in some ways No. 63 was the luckier. Only when I returned at night after a seemingly endless day in which everything went wrong, did I obtain news. Canteen Ma had been seen by mother in the place soon after I had left for the hospital, and my mother had followed her to a quiet side street and slipped the message into her hand while she was gazing into a shop window. My message would be over the Dutch frontier this very night. How I blessed Canteen Ma!

That evening Otto came up to me in the cafe. I thought I detected a shifty look about him, for at first his eyes ran round the room rather than meet my own.

"Fraulein, step aside a minute, will you please," he said to me in a low voice, grasping my arm. In fear and trembling I went, for I had no choice but to obey. I forced a smile of inquiry. As we stood at the foot of the stairs, he said:

"Fraulein I want to speak to you on a very serious matter." The last vestige of color left my cheeks. "Will you come to my room? We can be sure of being alone there, at any rate. Come, you can trust me. We have always been friends."

I nodded, trying not to look amazed, and followed him up the stairs. What in the world did Otto intend to say to me? He did not intend to make improper advances; he was not that type.

Otto drew up a chair by the bedside, and leaned his face on his hands. "Everywhere I hear good reports of you. You can be trusted and have sense, Fraulein," he started.

I stared at him, hardly believing my ears.

"You may well look surprised, Fraulein," he continued, standing up and beginning to pace to and fro, "but I have certain knowledge that there are at least three dangerous spies in Roulers at this moment. One, a woman, was shot last night, I understand." He was looking at me intensely again. He meant poor No. 63 evidently — so she was a woman like myself. I met his gaze calmly. What was Otto thinking behind those eyes. If only I knew. Could his have been the dark silhouette which had invaded the silent alley last night? Could he have followed me home? Was I on trial without realizing it, and was he waiting for me to betray myself unawares? What did he know —what did he know? Yet did he know anything? Did he suspect anything?

"Who are these people you suspect?" I asked. He smiled, and there came into his eyes that look of boyish pride at being in possession of a secret.

"That, Marthe, I shall reserve to myself."

"Well, I am waiting for my orders," I reminded him. Otto then proceded to give me detailed notes of the men and women I was to watch in Roulers. I did not know whether they were spies or not, although in one or two cases I strongly suspected such to be the case. However, they had nothing to fear from me whatever befell. Apparently neither Alphonse nor Stephen was under suspicion, but then perhaps every word Otto was saying to me in his now seemingly eager boyish way was merely a "blind."

Hotbed of Treachery.

Otto wished me to gain the confidence of those Belgians whom he had named to me as being under suspicion. He said that the high authorities looked on Roulers as a regular hotbed of treachery—what insolence these Germans had to use such a word against the enforced slaves of their Kultur—he believed that I might be able to tell him something of the organized system of espionage which he knew existed, and which his superiors repeatedly ordered must be checked. Otto also suspected certain Alsatian conscripts in German uniform, again perhaps rightly, but he could prove nothing against them.

"Understand, Marthe," he finished, "I want results, and we are prepared to reward handsomely those who produce them. What is happening here is serious. The higher command are not pleased with us." He smiled a little ruefully and gave me another cigarette.

"Marthe," he stopped and looked down at me in his frank, almost affectionate way, "you are a very intelligent girl, far more intelligent than most girls—and you are pretty, too. I believe you could help us a great deal." He was caressing my hair with his well-shaped fingers, thoughtfully.

I stood up. "Herr Otto," I said, "I am going to bed now, and I shall think about what you have said, and the ways in which I can help you." "Good night, and pleasant dreams, meine liebe Fraulein," he said softly as he opened the door for me. But what was Otto thinking?—What was Otto thinking?

Soon after midnight three nights later, I was wakened by the angry droning of the "Seven Sisters" overhead. I wondered what those soldiers in the brewery were thinking about. For all they knew it was just an ordinary raid. A few shattered houses, a few stray casualties, nothing for soldiers to worry themselves about. How they would have scattered like wasps from a disturbed nest had they known that they were the magnet drawing the "Seven Sisters." The antiaircraft barrage had roared into full blast when I heard the screaming whistle which heralded the descent of the first bomb. Time and again the "Seven Sisters" were caught in the sweep of the searchlights, but the efforts of the German gunners were unavailing. The thud of explosion after explosion followed in rapid succession, and above the din I heard human screams.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES
Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality
Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. They should pour out thru the bladder 3 pints of fluid a day which contains 4 pounds of waste matter.
If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.
If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.
But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Your common sense will tell you that this is impossible. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

If I Lie.

By Katherine Smith.

Little lies are glibly spoken,
They are meant to tease or coax.
If I make them please consider
Little lies as little jokes.

Should you wound a tender corner
Of my heart, the thoughtless touch
Forces me to lie—still hoping You'l consider it as such.

School Turns Problem Girls From Crime

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. JOHN F. CROSBY, above, is one of the benefactresses of St. Gertrude's School for problem girls.

HELPING the problem girl to find self-expression in some line in which she is interested may prevent her becoming a juvenile delinquent. Operating on this principle, St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts, opened in 1926, has been deflecting many juvenile court prospects into lives of useful citizenship.

The school developed out of a clinic for the mental problems of children and adults at Providence Hospital. It was found at this clinic two classes of children could not make progress in school: Those who were incapable of learning to read and write, and those who had the capacity, but could not learn in the ordinary crowded classroom.

A card party for the benefit of the school will be given at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Wardman Park Hotel. Patrons and sponsors for the event include Mrs. John Francis Crosby, Mrs. Pierce Butler, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Representative Mary T. Norton, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Mrs. Davis Elkins, Mrs. Robert Kempton, Mrs. John Cammack, sr., Mrs. Paul Henry Bastedo, Mrs. John Walsh, Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, Mrs. B. Francis Saul and Mrs. Milton Ailes.

Keeping Posted

A Prayerful Singer.

EMILY WITHERS is one of Washington's most attractive young singers. Although, as the wife of Maj. Withers, she has done considerable traveling in the four years since her marriage, she has managed to "keep up her music," as the saying goes. She is particularly in demand for church singing.

"I remember so plainly how my mother, always emphasizing that we girls must have faith," she said the other day. "She said if we prayed hard enough for anything, we'd get it.

• • • •

"Well, one day when I was about 12 years old, I thought I'd test this praying business. So I prayed very hard to myself as I was doing the supper dishes—I hated to do dishes. I prayed the kettles which I had just hung on their hooks over the sink be moved to hooks across the room. But, of course, nothing happened. I was quite disgusted.

"However," she finished, "I must have really believed in prayer, for one day when mother was out and an awful storm came up I gathered my sisters around me in the living-room, shut the shutters, and mother said I was praying as hard and loud as I could when she came in."

Artist Father and Son.

MARCEL JOURNET'S singing of Mephisto was said in his time to outshine all other interpretations. The great singer died a few months ago, but there is still a fine artist of the same name—his son.

Marcel Journet is in Washington this week, playing the role of a young French doctor in "The Wind and the Rain" at the Belasco.

• • • •

M. Journet admitted he had wanted to follow his famous father, but his voice had not been of great calibre. Then he tried dancing. He was premier danseur for a spectacular production in Paris when he broke an ankle tendon in a fall. So that ended his dancing career.

• • • •

After the war, in which he served in the French Infantry, he studied mimicry with the famous Swiss, Sverin, and toured in his company, doing French pantomimes. Finally, he went into straight dramatic work.

A Big Black Hand.

A PROMINENT army officer, sipping a cocktail at the big show which opened yesterday at Bradley Farms, said:

"It certainly is good to get the real thing to drink again and be able to enjoy it out in the open, isn't it?"

• • • •

"I was on the train coming down from New York late at night. A friend was sharing my berth, and the porter had just finished making up the berth above, as we crawled into ours. When we settled ourselves, I said to my friend, 'I've got a little real Scotch here, how would you like some?' Whereupon, before he could reply, a black hand slid in between the curtains holding a pleadingly empty paper cup.

• • • •

"I couldn't help but laugh and put some liquor in the cup. But I've never seen a paper cup from that day to this that I haven't thought of that other one in the big black hand."

Mother Happy Now; Given Up Self-Expression

Mrs. Hugo Black, Senator's Wife, Finds Joy in Her Newest Baby.

THE first prize for Mother's Day in Senatorial circles should be unanimously awarded Mrs. Hugo L. Black, wife of the brilliant young Senator from Birmingham, Ala. The Blacks have the youngest Senatorial baby—6-month-old Martha Josephine.

Martha Josephine's big blue eyes are fringed with black lashes and her hair—what there is of it—is reddish gold. She is very wide-awake and looks right into you when you happen into her line of vision. She likes to play the piano. She was at it lustily, held proudly in her mammy's arms, when the photographer asked her to please stop long enough to have her picture taken with her lovely, prematurely white-haired mother.

Sterling, her 9-year-old brother, slipped downstairs in bathrobe and slippers to witness the event. His tonsils were taken out a couple of days ago and he was temporarily home from school. Sterling and his older brother, Hugo, jr., who is 12, attend the Horace Mann School in New York.

Urged to Do Likewise.

"A friend told me you urged all other Senators' wives to get themselves some new babies right after Martha Josephine was born," said the visitor when Mammy Mary had carried the baby off for her bottle and nap.

"Yes, I did," admitted Mrs. Black. "You see, Martha Josephine is the first baby I've really taken time to enjoy. I missed both the boys' babyhood and didn't realize how I'd cheated myself until I found out what grand fun taking care of a little baby could be, when Martha Josephine came along.

"Hugo and I were married soon after the war when it wasn't the thing to have babies. Everybody dashed around trying to 'express' themselves, and traveled.

"We traveled, too. We went to Bermuda, Haiti and lots of other places. We parked our first and second babies with relatives and nurses. But I didn't get such a thrill out of the traveling and being a free individual as I had thought I would. I had no idea the thing that would make me happiest was waiting for me right at home. After all, what grander or fuller expression can a woman have than through her children? And how can she do that if she is away from them all the time? She can't. Now I enjoy both my boys so much more as well as the baby, spending most of my time with them. For the first time in my life I am really contented. They're the best company in the world."

There are only two small babies in Senate circles at the moment. The other is the year-old son of Senator "Bob" and Mrs. La Follette, of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Black is full of stories about her children and their doings. She told of how Sterling went through a "cruel streak"—as children will—when he'd ask his father to run over everything in sight when they were out driving.

"Run over that dog—run over that man—run over that cat," he'd say, according to Mrs. Black. But, one day, when a boy on a bicycle was in front of the car, Sterling said:

"Don't run over that boy, Dad!"

His father, surprised at the sudden change of heart, asked, "Why don't you want me to run over that boy?"

"Because he's riding my bicycle."

Meeting and Houseparty Held at Mount Vernon

By Virginia Lee Warren.

WHEN LATE AFTERNOON shadows streak white pillars and tidy rows of boxwood at Mount Vernon today, visitors, no matter how much they may want to linger, must hasten through the exit gate in obedience to closing rules. More fortunate are 28 women from as Many States who will spend not only tonight at the National shrine, but will remain there for ten days.

Sixty-eighth Time.

This is the sixty-eighth time officers of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association of the Union have had a combined business meeting and house party at Washington's far-flung estate on the Potomac. The first gathering of the kind was held in 1854, soon after the association was formed for the purpose of taking care of and preserving Mount Vernon.

For years the women, while staying at Washington's home, slept in beds formerly occupied by Washington's family, ate food prepared in Washington's kitchen. They crowded themselves into 11 bedrooms and, during the day, endured the scrutiny of sightseers, all for the sake of romance and sentiment.

But about five years ago romance and sentiment lost out to such modern conveniences as bathtubs and hot running water. The women moved over to the servants' quarters which had been thoroughly modernized under the direction of Harrison H. Dodge, superintendent of Mount Vernon. As welcome as modern improvements was the privacy. Council meetings are still held in the mansion's banquet hall, with frequent recesses called to allow sightseers to wander through it.

The number who attend the gathering dwindles each year. Considered a great honor to belong to the association—the oldest incorporated group of women in America—few resignations are received. But as the members grow older they find it increasingly difficult to make the pilgrimage to the big white-pillared house on the Potomac. The group this spring is the smallest in years. Some were kept at home by illness. One member, Miss Annie Ragan King, of Louisiana, has died since the last meeting.

Those Present.

Those attending the present session are Mrs. Alice H. Richards, of Maine, regent of the association, and the following vice regents: Mrs. Robert D. Johnston, of Alabama; Mrs. Eliza F. Leary, of Washington; Mrs. Horace Mann Tower, of Iowa; Mrs. Thomas Palmer Denham, of Florida; Mrs. Charles Eliot Furness, of Minnesota; Miss Annie Burr Jennings, of Connecticut; Mrs. Willard Hall Bradford, of New Jersey; Mrs. Charles Nagel, of Missouri; Mrs. George A. Carpenter, of Illinois; Miss Mary Govan Billups, of Mississippi; Mrs. William Ewen Shipp, of North Carolina.

Mrs. Horton Pope, of Colorado; Mrs. Horace Van Deventer, of Tennessee; Mrs. Charles S. Wheeler, of California; Mrs. Henry Gold Danforth, of New York; Miss Mary Mason Scott, of Kentucky; Mrs. Alexander C. Troup, of Nebraska; Miss Virginia Leigh Porcher, of South Carolina; Miss Constance Lee Peterkin, of West Virginia; Mrs. Benjamin S. Warren, of Michigan; Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, of Virginia; Mrs. Gordon Woodbury, of New Hampshire, Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Pepper, of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Harold Lee Berry, of Maine; Mrs. Horace Brown, of Vermont; Miss Helen Louise Hargent, of the District of Columbia, and Mrs. J. Fairfax Loughborough, of Arkansas.

Women Term Bill a Victory

Passage of Equal Nationality Measure Lauded as Emancipation.

THE equal nationality bill removing all discriminations against women in the nationality laws of this country was passed yesterday by the Senate. The measure was passed by the House April 24.

Members of the National Woman's Party who worked on behalf of the bill termed its passage "the first great victory for equal rights since the enfranchisement of women in 1920." Miss Alice Paul, founder of the National Woman's Party, said:

"Coming at this time, when in many countries women are being ruthlessly deprived of the rights which they had won with great hardship, this legislation gives the United States leadership in the movement for the emancipation of women."

The measure is in line with the policy embodied in the equal nationality treaty signed at the Pan-American conference at Montevideo. This treaty will be presented to the Senate soon for ratification.

Another Attorney Deplores Jurists' Disinterest in Dress

Still Another, Anonymous by Request, Says Tailored Clothes Give Her Competent Feeling That She Is Competing With Men on an Equality Basis.

Dress in ultrafeminine fashion, say some women lawyers. Severely tailored clothes are the only things suitable for a courtroom, say others. Juries are impressed by nice clothes, is one opinion. Competence is the only thing that counts, is another.

This is the fifth in a series of six articles about clothes and their relation to "women who do things."

By Irene Hasbrook.

"IT'S NOT eyes, nor lips, nor legs, nor clothes nor anything else but gray matter—that's all a person cares about in a lawyer when he's in jail and wants to get out."

In jail, yes. But how about in court?

"Why, just offhand, I don't believe I've ever been in court without somebody, some man, complimenting me on what I was wearing. Indeed they do notice your clothes."

Not Like Mae West.

"It's not that a lawyer should dress like Mae West or anything of the sort. But it's better to receive favorable comment on your clothes than to attract attention by being carelessly dressed. Don't you think?"

Some women lawyers swing hard to the opposite opinion. They seem to have a "we're asking no favors" complex, to move with a chip of femininity on their shoulders.

"I want to compete with men on their own ground. I wear tailored suits when I'm in court, tailored suits with plain shirts and ties. In this way I do not stand out in a courtroom full of men as being conspicuously feminine, and I can attend to my business more competently for knowing this."

She said her say in a clear voice, then affixed the P. S. she wished to remain anonymous.

Dean Grace Hays Riley, of Washington Law School, had something to offer on the matter. She approves tailored clothes for courtroom wear, thinks fashion novelties are a mistake and duly deplores red nail polish as all good deans should. She said she'd never seen any red nails in action before the bench.

She can find some if she looks around. One of the most attractive and competent young women pursuing the profession of law in Washington wears hers jauntily wherever she may go, to parties or to court.

"And until the New Deal passes a law I'll go on wearing them. I mean, whose nails are they anyway?"

She's another one of the numerous retiring lady lawyers. Would I please not use her name—"we get too much publicity as it is. Of course you can do anything you want with what I've said. But that won't do any good, will it, as readers will think you've invented it yourself."

Now the readers' belief in the authenticity of the thing is well shaken, the remainder of her remarks will be noted.

Those Run-Down Heels.

"Women lawyers definitely do not pay enough attention to their clothes. They seem to think it unprofessional or something. The shoes you see around, for instance—awful, some of them. All run-down at the heels and just generally dreadful. And being well shod is such an essential for any lady, whether in a profession or anywhere.

"Also it doesn't demonstrate any legal ability to go around looking, shall we say, rather unwashed. Do they? You should see some of them. And uncombed, too. After all, neatness is an axiom nearly all men regard punctiliously and I hardly see how women can do less."

There was lots of panning, but some praise to relieve it. She considered some lawyers did extremely well in the matter of dress and appearance. "They look well groomed and smart. They're neither too frilly nor too tailored."

She cited Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt. The lawyer who has argued more cases before the Supreme Court of the United States than any other woman attorney, goes in for black and white. Usually black, relieved with white, not prints.

Miss Grace Kanode, aid to Chief Justice Wheat, of the District Supreme Court, has sparkle and dash and wears clothes as they should be worn. Her offering was, "I wish women lawyers would shake off the idea none but Jezebels use cosmetics."

Attorney Burnita Shelton Mathews, of the blue eyes and sweet voice, remarked on the short sleeve problem.

"When it's hot weather I wear them in my office, but I always put on a jacket before going to court. I heard a woman lawyer was called down once by a judge for appearing in brief sleeves—I guess it was justified. I believe she was rather fat."

Read in tomorrow's Post about clothes and the ladies of the Fourth Estate, those who scour the town from the White House to police courts in search of news.

Today's Religion Called Sincere By Club Head

THIRTY years ago young people were religious because it was fashionable. Today they are religious from personal choice.

"And when people are religious as a result of intelligent choice, they are much more sincere than when they join a church because it is expected of them," said Miss Cornelia Van Asch Van Wyck.

Miss Van Wyck, president of the International Council of the Y. W. C. A., is at the Dodge Hotel for a few days before returning to her home in Wrecht, Holland. She came to the United States to attend the Y. W. C. A. annual convention at Philadelphia.

"While the number of young people who are affiliated with religious organizations is not so large today as 30 years ago," Miss Van Wyck continued, "members of these groups are sincerely trying to apply the principles of Christianity to their daily lives."

Miss Van Wyck believes modern young people demand a religion that will not conflict with their knowledge of science, and one that also has a workable philosophy and emotional appeal.

"They want to be able to think about their religion and accept it with their minds as well as their emotions," she said. "When they can do this, they are quite willing to surrender themselves to its influence."

Defending the Oxford group, which has been criticized by orthodox groups, Miss Van Wyck said:

"It is a good organization, because it reaches people who would join no other religious group. It appeals to intelligent, thinking people, and shows that the principles of Christianity are practical. I do not think the group offers a complete solution to the religious problems of the day, but it is a constructive step."

Due to the fact the governments have taken over the training of young people in civic and physical matters in many European countries, Miss Van Wyck says the work of the Y. W. C. A. on the Continent is now restricted to the spiritual.

"We feel the most we can do now is to give young people spiritual strength to face their problems," she said. "We want to keep them from giving way to dispair and hopelessness. We want girls all over the world to face life, in all its phases, with high idealism."

HOW WOMEN CAN WIN MEN AND MEN WIN
The Favor of Other Men

Unless two pints of bile juice flow daily from your liver into your bowels, your food decays in your bowels. This poisons your whole body. Movements get hard and constipated. You get yellow tongue, yellow skin, pimples, dull eyes, bad breath, bad taste, gas, dizziness, headache. You have become an ugly-looking, foul-smelling, sour-thinking person. You have lost your personal charm. Everybody wants to run from you.

But don't take salts, mineral waters, oils, laxative pills, laxative candies or chewing gums and expect them to get rid of this poison that destroys your personal charm. They can't do it, for they only move out the tail end of your bowels and that doesn't take away enough of the decayed poison. Cosmetics won't help at all.

Only a free flow of your bile juice will stop this decay poison in your bowels. The one mild vegetable medicine which starts a free flow of your bile juice is Carter's Little Liver Pills. No calomel (mercury) in Carter's. Only fine, mild vegetable extracts. If you would bring back your personal charm to win men, start taking Carter's Little Liver Pills according to directions today. 25¢ at drug stores.

Refuse "something just as good", for it may gripe, loosen teeth or scald rectum. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for. © 1933, C. M. Co.

Two Rising Young Film Stars Set About Their Summer Chores—Keith's Reborn

Fairbanks and Cantor Engage Gelatine Muse

Each Tackles New Picture; Bebe and Ben Due Today; Theater Chatter.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

With the aspirate and explosive Master Jimmy Durante taking over the duties formerly performed by the electric Mr. Eddie Cantor before the microphones of that celebrated Sabbath evening Java hour, and Mr. Cantor arriving, pop-eyed and breathless, in Hollywood to make his annual musical comedy for Samuel Goldwyn, it has become known that in this year's picture, bearing the hopeful title of "The Treasure Hunt," the button-orbed minstrel will be seen as an African explorer, encountering adventures in the jungles equal in hilarity to those he faced as a Roman slave in "Roman Scandals," or as a bull-baiter in the slightly more remote "The Kid From Spain."

The story of the new picture, it is said, is rapidly being completed by Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin and Nunnally Johnson, three thoroughly competent journeyman funny fellows. It contains, according to late dispatches, a good deal of satire on the jungle-animal pictures that have been popular in recent years, which, to many, may seem a hard topic to Buck!

Singing Leading Women.

Ethel Merman is to appear with Cantor as his leading woman, thus perpetuating the splendid idea of casting a singing comedienne opposite the star—as was done when Ruth Etting appeared with him in "Roman Scandals."

Ann Sothern, who also will be prominently cast in Cantor's support, is by way of being a bit of singer on her own account, as you will remember from "Let's Fall in Love" and will discover all over again in "Melody in Spring." If you recall her with Jack Whiting in "America's Sweetheart," on the stage of the National a few seasons back, it will not be necessary to bother about recollecting the films mentioned.

It is the present expectation that "The Treasure Hunt' will be concluded, one way or another, some time along the middle of the summer for release through United Artists in the fall.

Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, Mr. and Mrs. Lyon in private life, who are to appear in person on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, will arrive in Washington this afternoon at 4 o'clock from New York.

Tonight at 8:30 at the Carlton, the Loew executives, under the social directorship of City Manager Carter Barron, will tender the visiting stars a reception, at which the guests of honor will renew many old acquaintanceships, formed when they were here two years ago.

On this visit there will be a third member of the party, according to report, little Miss "Babs" Lyon, accompanying her parents on this tour of the East. Last time, little Miss Barbara was left at home on the West Coast, greatly to her parents' concern.

"Don Juan" Goes Private!

Speaking of prospective vehicles for popular stars of the screen, which is what we were doing in the case of Mr. Cantor, it should relieve the anxiety of his impatient American public—if any—to know that over one-third of "The Private Life of Don Juan," Douglas Fairbanks' picture now being produced by London Films under the direction of Alexander Korda, is to be made in Spain, the actual locale of the story.

The greater part of the picture is being produced at the Elstree Studios, near London, but all the exterior shots that require authentic atmosphere will be made against the original backgrounds, with a company of more than 200 players and technicians going to Spain "on location," quite in the Hollywood manner.

Exposition Locations.

The exposition buildings at Barcelona will be utilized for some of the backgrounds. Recently Douglas Fairbanks and his son, Doug, jr., just to refute the canard of utter idleness and constant social lollygagging, went to Spain together on a pleasure trip, which they made partially business by noting locations for the new film.

Among other things, they are said to have discovered that several blocks of buildings in the Barcelona Exposition, representing a street in Seville, was more like a street in Seville than a street in Seville is like itself! You get the idea.

The story of "The Private Life of Don Juan"—which must be something like a sequel to the first sound picture in which John Barrymore ever appeared—is concerned with the return to his native Spain from adventures in foreign lands of the famous legendary lover.

The script has been rewritten by Frederic Lonsdale, the celebrated English playwright, which, one suspects, did it no harm whatever.

The Rambling Marionettes of the Junior League will close their season of Friday performances at their improvised theater, 1315 Connecticut avenue, this week. They will present Theodore Tiller 2d, and his marionettes in three performances—Friday, at 3:45, "Peter Rabbit;" Saturday, at 10:30, "The Three Bears;" Saturday afternoon, "The Three Little Pigs."

The junior of the Theodore Tillers has entertained the children of Washington with his cleverly made and manipulated puppets since he was a mere lad and needs no introduction to the youngsters of the Capital. His ability as a playwright also has engaged the interested

On Capital Screens Tomorrow

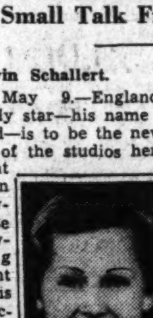
A voice new to stellar roles on the screen will be heard in Washington next week, when Lanny Ross, left above, appears on the silver sheet at the Earle opposite Ann Sothern in "Melody in Spring." Elissa Landi, right, also will be among the new week's stars in "Sisters Under the Skin," in which she has Joseph Schildkraut as leading man. Both pictures begin their engagements tomorrow morning.

Straight From the Studios

One of England's Ace Comics Coming to Hollywood; Hobart Bosworth Once More Importantly Cast; Small Talk From Cinemaland.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, May 9.—England's first line comedy star—his name is Sydney Howard—is to be the newest acquisition of the studios here. It seems that the importation of British players goes on quite endlessly. Howard's coming will be an event because he is deemed the second best box-office luminary in England. The first, presumably, is Charles Laughton. Howard is to be brought out here for Reliance Pictures which seems to be spreading out very rapidly and especially as regards its foreign personnel. As plans stand now, Howard will be seen in a picture called "London Show Boat," or "Showboat of 1934." The story for this is now being shaped up. When it will be produced is somewhat uncertain but probably about mid-summer.



LILIAN HARVEY.

• • • •

Muni's Schedule.

Regardless of rumors, Paul Muni will do "Border Town" in the near future. He may follow that with "War Lord," although Edward G. Robinson is considered for that, too. The thing is that he probably won't go to M-G-M. for the production of "Four Walls," because he is needed so steadily at the Warner Studio. An effort has been made to borrow him for the Metro-Goldwyn feature.

• • • •

Old-Timer Seen Again.

Hobart Bosworth has an important role to play in "Whom the Gods Destroy" with Walter Connolly, and it's the first time in quite a while he has had a role of this magnitude. Bosworth was last seen importantly on the screen in "Lady for a Day," in which Connolly had the most important character role. Bosworth is, of course, one of the veterans of the films—perhaps "the" veteran. In this same film are now Henry Kolker and Carlo Schipe. It is the first to star Connolly.

• • • •

Shining Role.

Helen Twelvetrees is going to have a bright place in "The State vs. Elinor Norton," because of pleasing in "Now I'll Tell." The production will be directed by Hamilton MacFadden, who made "Stand Up and Cheer."

• • • •

Many Plans For Lilian.

Since peace has been declared between Lilian Harvey and the Fox studio, there seem to be a multitude of plans for this young lady who was in such a problematical situation just a few months ago. She is to appear in "Music in the Air" in all likelihood; also an adaptation of Rex Beach's "Serenade" is being contrived with her in mind. Lynn Starling, who wrote "Weak Sisters," is doing the dialogue for the picture. The adaptation is being made by Sally Sandlin, and Paul Martin will probably direct.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

John Eldredge acquired the romantic lead in "Big-Hearted Herbert," because he gave a good performance in "Man With Two Faces," formerly "The Dark Tower." He is newly arrived from England.

Huntley Gordon has been assigned to "Afterward," presumably in the Bruce Cabot role, because Cabot objected to playing it.

attention of discriminating adult audiences.

Keeping Up With Joneses!

Pursuant to its avowed policy of keeping up the procession, RKO-Keith's Theater points with pride to the following list of material improvements either in process of accomplishment or about to be undertaken in the Fifteenth street tabernacle of the titillating tintypes:

1. New carpet throughout the theater.
2. Fifty new aisle lights, installed in every nook and cranny of the theater as an aid to patrons going to their seats in the darkened auditorium.
4. Two new units added to the cooling plant, whatever that may mean. Already the cooling system is being used when outside temperatures are deemed to warrant it. (One learns that 12 degrees cooler than the street is the ideal level at which to keep the mercury in order to have the house "comfortably cool," with no shock to the customer upon his emergence once more into the asphalt inferno of the Washington streets in hot weather.)
5. New uniforms for the floor staff and complete new hangings and seat covers to carry out that "comfortably cool" delusion when the thermometer registers 108 in the shade and there is no shade!

This is, indeed, a very elegant program and, if I may be permitted to say so, comes not one whit too soon in the matter of some of its items. I am constrained to make this observation only after having had an orchestra cushion explode a bale of dusty stuffing all over the reverse side of my lap when I gently reposed the 97 pounds of my attenuated, but trim, person upon it one matinee recently.

That particular orchestra chair, I submit, stood in need of repair, if not actual replacement. And by the time the brush boy got through, so did the rear elevation of my pantaloons!

At last night's performance of "Her Master's Voice" by the National Theater Players, there were present large delegations from Kappa Delta Alumnae, the Friendly Forum of the First Congregational Church, Tau Phi Sorority, Pi Chapter and the Phi Lambda Tau Sorority.

Erratum.

This, of course, dispels an ancient fallacy. It seems that when Greek meets Greek, they don't open a restaurant; they go to the National!

Richmond, May 10 (AP).—In the drive to keep down Virginia's loss of life from automobiles, 20,000 motorists are being required to take vision or driving tests before July 1.

Nearly 750,000 drivers must have their operators' permits renewed by then, Motor Vehicle Director John Q. Rhodes said today. Test stations and permit renewal stations will be designated by the division.

New Week Will Supply Varied Theater Wares

Stage and Screen Promise Attractions of Worth in Downtown Area.

Although theatrical diversion has entered what is familiarly termed the "little season," the diversity of indoor amusements remains about what it was when the regular season of touring attractions was at its height.

A comparatively new play and an interesting revival are to be seen next week in the Belasco and National Theaters, respectively, with one of the most beautiful of the burlesque stars returning to the Gayety to bring spring cheer to the susceptible gentlemen of the bald-head row.

In the picture houses, beginning today and tomorrow, four new film releases will vie for favor with which the Capital already is acquainted.

• • • •

For the third attraction of the tenth spring and summer season of the National Theater Players, Manager Stephen E. Cochran has chosen one of a select group of older plays that ran more than a season on Broadway—"Welcome Stranger," an appealing comedy-drama by Aaron Hoffman, in which George Sidney achieved one of his greatest successes. The play is based on a theme that is believed to be of especial timeliness. For the central role of Isadore Solomon, Robert D. Fischer is being added to the personnel of the company. Freddie Sherman also returns to the fold in this play. Ruth Abbott, Roy Roberts, Kathryn Givney, Romaine Callender, Mrs. Hibbard and the other local favorites also will be congenially cast.

• • • •

A comedy that has recently completed a five-month run on Broadway will be presented at the Belasco next week, beginning Monday night, when "Big Hearted Herbert," by Sophie Kerr and Anna Steese Richardson, will be the bill, with Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield in the costellar parts. The story centers in a grouchy, cantankerous man, who is always contending that he began with nothing and attained success, and that there is no reason why his son should not do the same. The supporting company includes Ethel Wilson, King Calder, Josephine Duval, Freddie Stange, Herbert Duffy and numerous others. There will be the usual matinees on Thursday and Saturday.

• • • •

Ann Coria and Her Own Show will be the attraction at the Gayety Theater for the week beginning with the customary matinee performance on Sunday afternoon. Miss Corio, one of the stage's reigning beauties, needs no introduction to Washington audiences. George Broadhurst, the highest salaried comedian in burlesque, will be seen in the chief comedy assignments. A large cast and chorus will support the principals.

• • • •

Glen Echo Park enter the second week of its summer season on Saturday with all amusements going full blast—with the single exception of the crystal pool, which will not be available to lovers of water sports until May 26. All of the amusements are attracting happy crowds and dancing is enjoyed nightly, except Sunday, in the beautiful Spanish garden ballroom, to the rhythms of Dave MacWilliams' Orchestra. Ample facilities are provided for picnic parties.

• • • •

Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, in person, will provide the principal stage attraction at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. On the screen, the chief feature will be Paramount's latest vehicle for the swarthy talents of George Raft, "The Trumpet Blows," in which Frances Drake is seen to advantage. Adolphe Menjou leads the supporting company. Adair and Richard, in songs; Russ, Elmer and Armstrong, comedians, and Charles Currier, juggler, will complete the stage bill, with the Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin overture for good measure.

• • • •

Beginning tomorrow at the Earle Theater, Washington will make the acquaintance of a new screen personality and voice, in the person of Lanny Ross, who appears with Ann Sothern in "Melody in Spring," a new musical romance. The stage bill is headlined by Allan Cross and Henry Dunn, singing comedians, with Oscar Lorraine, fiddling comic; Van Horne Dancers and Jari, Renee and Vic. Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland are prominent in the cast supporting the youthful costars in "Melody in Spring."

• • • •

Elissa Landi, Joseph Schildkraut and Frank Morgan are the principal players in Columbia Pictures' production of "Sisters Under the Skin"—which smacks of Kipling's "Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady"—coming to the RKO-Keith Theater tomorrow for an engagement of one week. The plot action revolves around the love of a young millionaire for a show girl and is said to embody many interesting ramifications. The bill will be completed by the RKO News of the World and short sound subjects of varied interest.

• • • •

"Frankenstein" and "Dracula," as personified by Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi, will be seen together in a single picture at the Rialto Theater for the week beginning this morning, when the foremost screen attraction will be "The Black Cat," adapted from the Edgar Allan Poe short story of the same name. The cast surrounding the co-stars includes Anna Duncan, Lucille Lund, Jacqueline Wells, Herman Bing, David Manners and many more of note.

• • • •

So insistent has been the demand for further downtown showings of Warner Brothers' latest musical, "Twenty Million Sweethearts," that this lively subject will be offered again at the Metropolitan Theater beginning tomorrow, setting "Keep 'Em Rolling" back one week. Dick Powell and Ginger Rogers are the featured principals, with Pat O'Brien and numerous others prominently cast. Added short reels will round out the bill.

• • • •

Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow will present the second of the Tarzan pictures, starring Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan, "Tarzan and His Mate." This thrilling Edgar Rice Burroughs tale of the jungle recently scored a tremendous hit at the Palace. It will be supplemented by the customary auxiliary short-reels.

• • • •

"The House of Rothschild," probably the most imposing screen play in which George Arliss ever has been filmed, will be continued a second week at Loew's Palace Theater. In this magnificent subject, the star is supported by a distinguished cast that includes Mrs. Arliss, C. Aubrey Smith, Boris Karloff, Loretta Young, Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray, Helen Westley, Ivan Simpson, Robert Young and scores more.

Local Option Petitions To Be Filed Monday

Danville, Va., May 10 (Spl.).—M. O. Nelson, chairman of the dry steering committee, today deferred until next Monday the presentation of petitions to Judge Henry C. Leigh to call a local option election.

A sufficient number of names has been obtained, but Nelson said "we want to make the petitions impressive." The dry forces are campaigning actively, but the wet forces have not organized.

Danville Rites Planned For James L. Graveley

Danville, Va., May 10 (Spl.).—The body of James L. Graveley, 55, found dead in a Woodstock hotel early today, is expected here tomorrow and the funeral will be held Saturday.

Virginia Rum Buying Rules Made Public

Customer Must Certify Right to Purchase Under ABC Act.

Clerks Must Not Give Recommendation for Any Brands.

Richmond, May 10 (Spl.).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Board today completed the system under which Virginians will buy their liquor when the stores open next week, the outstanding regulation providing that the customer certify on a duplicate receipt that he is "permitted by the ABC act to make this purchase."

Price lists will be posted on the walls or other convenient places and the customer must fill out a written order. Clerks must not recommend any brand or type of liquor. A duplicate of the "permit" to buy is pasted to the package.

The board today was preparing to fill mail orders, but the plan for handling such orders may not be ready for some time after the Richmond stores open.

No local delivery service is contemplated immediately. The business will be purely cash and carry.

Meanwhile, State Senator George W. Layman, author of Virginia's prohibition law of 1926, last of the series of stringent prohibitory laws, has nothing but good words for the ABC Board's policy of cautious deliberation.

"This is a serious undertaking in which haste might be fatal," he said during his visit to Richmond to attend the Fisheries Commission meeting. "It is all important that the groundwork of the control system should be well laid. This the board apparently is doing. There is no reason for it to hurry."

Senator Layman was one of the dry representatives on the legislative commission which wrote the preliminary draft of the alcoholic beverage control law.

Colored Group Urges Building Of New School

Fredericksburg Council Also Hears Plea for More Police.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 10 (Spl.).—Revision of the plans for a new colored school in the vicinity of Gunnery Spring was asked of the city council last night by a delegation of colored men.

Ben Bumbray, speaker for the group, requested erection of an auditorium capable of seating at least 350, widening of the halls, provision for a cafeteria and installation of a telephone. City Manager L. J. Houston, jr., will consider the request and report on the additional cost.

Mayor Robert J. Payne urged enlargement of the police force, which he had recommended in his annual report, and called the council's attention to the increased number of robberies during the past year.

Capt. Louis J. Stoll, retired Washington captain of police, who was engaged by the council in 1932 to study the local law-enforcing organization, recommended doubling the force from 6 to 12 men. Objections to the plan were voiced because of the city's financial condition.

The council accepted the $100 bid of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for a 30-year franchise for use of streets and alleys for poles and wires. The company will make special arrangements for provision of city telephones.

An appropriation for placing advertising in the next issue of the Commonwealth, new magazine published by the State chamber of commerce, was approved.

Mother's Day Program.

Round Hill, Va., May 10 (Spl.). The young people's division of the Methodist Church will present a special Mother's Day program Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The preaching services will follow.

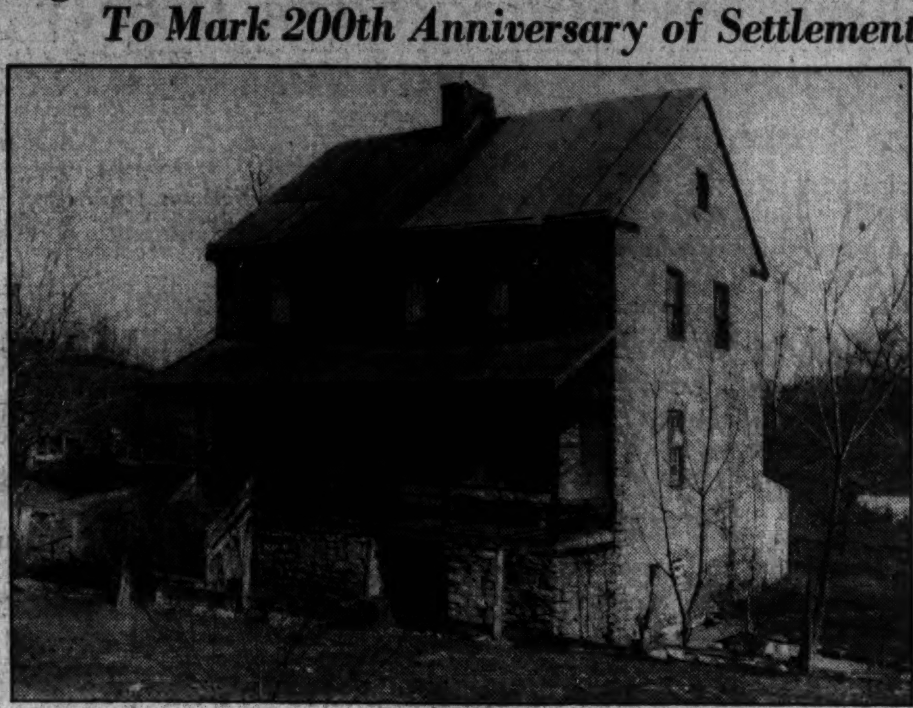
Hagerstown to Present Colorful Celebration To Mark 200th Anniversary of Settlement



The home of Jonathan Hager, founder of Hagerstown, Md., as it appears today, about which it is planned to center the bicentennial anniversary of the arrival of the first settler in the valley in which Hagerstown is the center. Next year marks the 200th anniversary of the arrival of the first settlers here and it is planned by the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce to stage a big celebration and pageant. In the meantime efforts are being launched to restore the Hager home as near its original condition as possible. The Hager house is located in the southwestern section of the city near the City Park.

Fete Next Year to Include Pageants Reflecting Early History.

By J. E. Hager.

Hagerstown, Md., May 10.—Next year will mark the 200th anniversary of the settling of the valley in which this city is located, and plans will be launched by the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce for one of the greatest celebrations in the history of Washington County.

It is the aim to center this celebration about the home of Jonathan Hager, founder of the city. This house is still standing in the southwestern part of the city near the City Park. It is planned to restore this home, now in a State of dilapidation, to as near its original condition as possible. Many of the original possessions of the founder, now the property of some of his descendants, would be placed in the house.

The celebration will probably continue for at least a week and include pageants of great beauty, as well as other events. The Chamber of Commerce is seeking a directing official who knows the early history of the community and whose ancestors are among the distinguished early settlers of the valley. The chamber hopes to be able to announce the bicentennary director and a supporting committee of leading citizens whose duties it would be to plan a program during the next year.

Settled in 1735.

History places the first settlers in this valley in 1735. The eastern section of Maryland had been settled for over a century; yet the struggle with fierce difficulties had been so great that it had taken 100 years to penetrate 75 miles from the shores of the Chesapeake into a valley more fertile than any which had been then settled.

The first settlers, it was recorded, first viewed this valley from Black Rock early in 1735. This is a sheer cliff of black rock 100 feet high against South Mountain, about 10 miles east of Hagerstown. Looking west, the first settlers saw a beautiful plain—the valley of the Antietam and the Conococheague, covered with waving grass six feet high.

Here and there were columns of smoke ascending from clumps of trees which surrounded gushing limestone springs, marking the locations of Indian villages.

Such was the valley of which Hagerstown is now the center, in the year of 1735.

The hardships of these pioneer settlers, cut off entirely from civilization by the Blue Ridge Mountains, is described in old records found here. They had none of the conveniences of those who lived on the coast. The settlers here lived for many years in houses built without a nail, because there was none to be had. They felled trees, cut them in proper lengths, notched them near the ends and built a pen.

Logs Held Roof.

After a height of seven or eight feet had been reached the end logs were made shorter and shorter until the side logs came together in an apex. A tree carefully selected was split up into boards and with these the roof was covered, the boards being held in place by heavy logs laid upon them. The floor was formed of the same roughly made boards, smoothed as much as possible with a broadaxe. A hole was cut for door and chimney place, and a chimney made of stones and clay. In making the doorway, wooden pins were used. Neighbors assisted each settler to build his home and when it was completed, usually in three days, there was a big frolic which lasted several days.

The furniture was made in like manner.

It is the plan to have groups taking part in the celebration next year attired in the costume of the first settlers here. This was almost as primitive as the dwellings and was largely patterned after the attire of the Indians. The male settlers wore hunting shirts of deerskin or homemade linsey, confined around the waist by a belt. Appended to this was a cape upon which some ornamentation of a rude type was displayed.

Breeches or leggings of deerskin and deerskin moccasins, held on the feet by thongs, completed the male's attire. From the belt were suspended the tomahawk and scalping knife.

His wife and daughters were dressed in the "linsey petticoat and bedgown," and their only attempt at ornamentation was a home-made handkerchief tied around the neck. The product of the men and women was of the rude domestic looms or of the chase.

The principal article of trade, which the early settler had to go across the mountain to procure, was salt, which was obtained at the seacoast. A bushel of salt in those days cost the price of a good cow and calf. For this he traded his furs.

Advertisement for Settlers.

Attention to this valley was directed about 1732 by Charles, Lord Baltimore, and he published advertisements offering inducements to settlers. To any person having a family who would come to the valley and actually settle, he offered "200 acres of land, in fee-simple, without paying any part of the 40 shillings sterling, for every hundred acres, payable to us by the conditions of plantations, and without paying any quit rents in three years after the first settlement, and then paying 4 shillings sterling for every hundred acres to us, or our heirs, for every year after the expiration of the said three years. While any single person, male or female, not above the age of 30, and not under 15, 100 acres of land upon the same terms."

Settlers attracted by this advertisement were largely from Germany, but a large number of the largest landgrants were to men of English descent from the eastern part of the State.

The first settlement, about 1735, was known as "Conogsgee" and is the site of Williamsport, on the Potomac River, and the first resident of the settlement to acquire legal title to his land was Charles Friend, in 1739.

This settlement soon became the outpost of civilization in the province. A block house was built there, and it became an important trading post.

The first town regularly laid off into lots in Washington County was Hagerstown, which was in 1739, when Jonathan Hager obtained a patent for 200 acres of land, which he named Hagers Choice. There he built the house which is shown above.

The house contains an arched cellar and is built over a strong spring of water. It was the refuge of Hager and his family during the Indian war, when many settlers and their families were massacred.

1,000 Acres Swept, U.S. FireAid Sought

West Virginia Flames Defy Fighters' Efforts.

Elkins, W. Va., May 10 (Spl.).—H. B. Moore, State district forester, today called upon the Federal Government for additional aid in fighting a forest fire on both sides of Rich Mountain, southwest of here, described as one of the worst forest fires ever seen in Randolph County.

The fire was burning today in four places and had swept more than 1,000 acres of second growth timber, all on privately owned land. The flames are close to Government land, Moore stated.

Men are working day and night shifts battling the flames, which broke out two days ago, and reinforcements have been received from the CCC Camp at Parsons. Wind has been carrying the fire over firebreaks into new territory.

A number of timber fires spread over a wide area in the Cheat Mountains today and rangers called for a hundred extra helpers.

Graduates Set Virginia High School Record

14,000 Will Be Graduated This Spring; Majority Are Girls.

Richmond, May 10 (Spl.).—More than 14,000 pupils, a record, are expected by the State Department of Education to be graduated from the accredited high schools of Virginia this session. The exact number, in the estimate prepared by C. J. Hyslup, acting supervisor of secondary education, is 14,094.

This figure is a gain of nearly 3,000 over the number of graduates at the end of the 1932-33 session, when 4,512 boys and 6,782 girls, or a total of 11,294, received diplomas. It emphasizes, according to Mr. Hyslup, the trend of recent years.

In all the years listed there were more girl graduates than boys, owing in great part to the fact that more boys than girls were compelled to go out and make a living.

At the end of the session 1929-30 there were a total of 8,683 graduates, of whom 3,135 were boys and 5,548 girls.

For the next session, 1930-31, the total was 9,757, of whom 3,899 were boys and 5,858 girls. In 1931-32 the total went to 10,617, of whom 4,153 were boys and 6,464 were girls.

Man Hurt Aiding Buzzard Receives No Compensation

Richmond, Va., May 10 (AP).—The Virginia Industrial Commission, which gave workmen's compensation to a man spurred by a rooster, today refused it to a man who fractured his elbow on a mission of mercy to a turkey buzzard on his boss's time.

Commissioner Parke P. Deans dismissed the claim of R. G. Smith, a Southern Biscuit Co. salesman. Smith was passing through Prince George County on business out of the Petersburg office. He saw a buzzard hoisting distres signals from a steel trap. He went to the bird's aid, but slipped on ice and fractured his elbow.

Commissioner Deans held the accident did not arise out of and during the course of Smith's employment.

CCC Squads Fight Raging Timber Fires

Incendiary Plot in Skyline Drive, Virginia, Fire Is Probed.

Richmond, May 10 (AP).—Fire continued to sweep a desolate path through Virginia timber lands early today and yesterday.

Just off Skyline drive in the National park area near Luray, a 350-acre blaze, which broke out in Dark Hollow Tuesday night and roared through the mountain side, was under control this morning after relays of 50 men each from CCC camps on Skyline drive kept all-night vigils.

Causes of the fire were sought today by park officials after reports were received of incendiarism through squatter areas. Monday and Tuesday a 200-acre tract was burned in Old Rag Hollow.

A 5,000-acre brush fire was still burning at a late hour last night on the timber lands between Coeburn, Va., Tacoma and High Knob. Fire on Big and Little Stony Creeks in the Stone Mountain section appeared to be close to Norton, Va. Men from the CCC camps near Big Stone Gap have been battling the fire since Thursday.

Fear was expressed by game conservation officials that scores of deer and turkey restocked in this area during the past few years would be completely wiped out.

Thousands of dollars damage was estimated in southwest mountain districts from fires which have burned for more than a week in five counties. At least three big fires are reported to be sweeping the region, and from his office in Charlottesville, Va., Fred Pederson, Virginia forester, was ordered yesterday on a tour of the area.

The worst blaze on territory over which the State Forestry Department has supervision is in Montgomery County near Layman. CCC men from camps at Catawba, Barbours Creek and Pembroke, Va., have been drafted to aid forest wardens in checking it.

Other disastrous fires are raging in Franklin County, near Boones Mill, where a week-old fire flared late yesterday. All available men in the community were summoned to fight it. In Patrick County, near Stuart, flames have roared unchecked for several days and are reported to have destroyed more than 15,000 acres of valuable timber land.

Unusually dry weather throughout southwestern Virginia for the past two weeks is blamed for the fires.

Practically the entire Pinnacles tract in Patrick County, where Danville city officials proposed to develop a water-power plant, has been ravaged by fires which have burned 20,000 acres and are still beyond control, especially in Kibler and Meadow Creek, Va., areas.

50,000 May Attend Fete At St. Marys

Maryland Birthday Ritual Expected to Draw Huge Crowd.

St. Marys City, Md., May 9 (Spl.).—Maryland's two-day celebration of its 300th birthday, June 15 and 16 at St. Marys City, will attract upward of 50,000 persons to Southern Maryland, and will mean thousands of dollars to merchants, hotel men, boarding housekeepers, and private citizens of the district, it was estimated here today.

It is expected rooms in hotels and boarding houses will be engaged long in advance of the fete, and that hundreds of private homes will be opened for room renting.

The official program of the Maryland tercentenary commission lists the first event of the celebration at 10 a. m. on June 15, when the presentation of gifts for the replica of Maryland's first statehouse will be made. These gifts will include furnishings for the various rooms in the building and displays for the museum to be opened on the second floor. The gifts will be presented by the City of Baltimore and by various counties and towns throughout the State.

Landing to be Repeated.

Then replicas of the Ark and the Dove, seventeenth century vessels which brought the first Maryland colonists to the shores of the Potomac, will sail up the river and anchor offshore, at approximately the same spot that the original ships ended their long voyage from England. The replicas are nearing completion in a shipyard at Galesville.

Crews and passengers of the ship, clad in seventeenth century costumes similar to those worn by the Maryland colonists, will land from the vessels and go through the ceremony of taking possession of the land for Cecil Calvert, Lord Baltimore.

Next will come a military parade, in which regular Army soldiers from Fort Myer, Fort Meade, Fort Howard and other military posts in Maryland and Virginia will take part. Several units from the First and Fifth Regiments, Maryland National Guard, also will participate. Gen. Milton A. Rexford will be in charge. Two military bands will be in the line of march.

Concert in Stadium.

After the parade will come a concert in the temporary stadium to be erected facing St. Mary's River. The principal event of the afternoon will be the first presentation of the Tercentenary pageant, in which hundreds of residents of the southern Maryland counties will take part in costume. The presentation is entitled "St. Mary's, the Mother of Maryland," and will be in eight episodes.

At night a water carnival will be held on the Potomac, with boats from all parts of Maryland participating. The little harbor of St. Marys City will be illuminated, and there will be dancing on a specially-built pavilion.

The next day will be featured by the official presentation and acceptance in behalf of the State of the State House replica. There will be a commemoration address, followed by the second presentation of the pageant.

Hagerstown Man, at 99, Hikes 5 Miles in Celebration

Hagerstown, Md., May 10 (Spl.).—Henry Clay Reynolds, Hagerstown's oldest resident, today celebrated his ninety-ninth birthday anniversary with a 5-mile hike. Hale and hearty, possessed of all his faculties, he already is looking forward to celebrating his 100th anniversary.

Reynolds, as well preserved as most men are at 70, was born May 10, 1835, at Pinocle Springs, Md., near Harpers Ferry, W. Va.

He attributes his longevity to a number of things, including long hikes, and his diet. He never uses intoxicants or tobacco, rarely eats meat, or drinks coffee or tea. His diet is virtually the same as it has been all of his life—raw fruit, green leaf vegetables, oat meal and corn bread.

Reynolds has a son, Phillip, 77, at Shepardstown, W. Va., and a daughter, Mrs. Bertha M. Bennett, this city. His mother died when he was 4 years old. He married when he was 21.

Reminiscing of his early life, which he spent in hard work, he said that he began working besides slaves when he was 16 years old, cradling wheat with a 53-inch scythe, quarried stone for many years and was employed as trackman on the Norfolk & Western Railroad for 40 years, where he learned the value of walking for health.

Krout Is Given Life in Killing Of Hotel Man

Sherley Slayer Convicted in 24 Hours After Trial Starts.

Cumberland, Md., May 10 (Spl.). Within 24 hours after his trial was called, Claude S. Krout, 47, restaurant operator, of Hagerstown, was sentenced to the Maryland Penitentiary for life today for the slaying of Owen D. Sherley, proprietor of the Vivian Hotel, Hagerstown.

The jury, given the case last night, was unable to agree and was locked up. Agreement was reached this morning. Krout was found guilty of murder in the first degree without capital punishment. Judge D. Lindley Sloan said the jury virtually set the sentence.

Krout admitted the slaying, which the State said was premeditated, but the jury took into consideration the claim of "mental upset," which the prosecution advanced.

This was one of the quickest trials of this character in the history of the local court, and it is expected that within 48 hours after it started Krout will have started his life sentence. The case was removed from Washington County.

Krout stated he had been criticized by his wife for failing to make profits in the restaurant business, and added that he worked an average of 12 hours a day to keep things going, although he had long been in ill health.

Gehrig's 2 Homers, 2 Doubles Drive in 7 Runs as Yanks Win, 13-3

Equals Mark For Modern Baseball

Leaves Game Following Feat; Said to Have "Heavy Cold."

Earnshaw, Stine Yield Blows; Bases Full on Second Homer.

NEW YORK, May 10 (AP).—Paced by some prodigious swatting on the part of Lou Gehrig, the Yankees assaulted Big George Earnshaw and Lee Stine for a dozen well-timed hits today, and swamped the White Sox under a 13-to-3 score in the first game of their series.

Gehrig drove in the first Yankee run with a double in the first inning that scored Earle Combs and started the Yanks off to a five-run rally against Earnshaw. In the second he swatted his fifth homer of the season, the blow that sent the "Big Moose" to the showers. He continued with another two-bagger in the fourth and finally clouted a home run with the bases full in the fifth.

After that he retired because of a "heavy cold" giving over his job to Lyn Lary after having equaled a "modern major league record of four long hits in one game and having driven home seven counters.

Yanks Stop Scoring.

The Yanks stopped scoring as soon as he departed, getting only two hits off Stine in their last three innings.

Charley Ruffing had an easy time turning in his fifth straight mound victory after the Yankees had set him with the long lead. He allowed only eight hits, four of them in the last two innings and didn't allow a run until the eighth, then the Sox got two tallies when Lary's error was followed by singles by Evan Swanson and Zeke Bonura, a walk and a double play. In the final frame Frenchy Bordogaray walloped a pinch triple and came home on Mule Haas' single.

In addition to giving up a dozen hits, the Chicago pitchers granted as many walks, hit one batsman and made three wild pitches, one of which let a run score.

Goslin's Homer Scores All Tiger Runs, but A's Cop, 5 to 3.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10 (AP).—The Athletics turned on their old pal, Mickey Cochrane, and his Detroit Tigers today and registered their fourth straight victory with a score of 5 to 3.

Home runs accounted for the bulk of the day's tallies. Bob Johnson wound up a four-run assault on Rowe in the third inning by hitting his fifth homer of the year with one on base. In the sixth inning, Pinky Higgins hit for the circuit.

Goose Goslin drove in all the Detroit counters by a home run in the fifth with Owen and Rowe on bases.

Reds Hit in Pinches To Beat Braves, 5-2

Cincinnati, May 10 (AP).—Lee's triple and an error by Gordon Slade cost Si Johnson a shutout today as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Boston Braves, 5 to 2.

The error let McManus reach the paths in the seventh, to advance on a single and score on a pop-out. The triple, giving Lee another perfect day at bat, let him score on an out in a futile one-man rally.

A double by Shiver paved the way for two Red runs in the first, Lombardi's triple added to singles by Koenig and Shiver tallied two more in the sixth, and Moore's double drove in Blakeley in the seventh.

Virginia Game Rained Out.

Charlottesville, Va., May 10 (Spl.). The second Virginia-West Virginia game today was halted in the second inning and the heavy rain that followed after a half-hour intermission prevented further play. Neither side had scored. Rogers was on the mound for Virginia and Shaffer for the Mountaineers.

Indians Spot Foes 6 Runs, Win 11-10

Red Sox Hammered Back by Averill and Vosmik; 7 Go on Mound.

BOSTON, May 10 (AP).—Cleveland spotted the Boston Red Sox six runs in the first inning today and then proceeded to take their measure, 11 to 10, in a game in which a total of seven pitchers went to the mound.

Averill boosted his team into the running in the fifth inning when, with two men aboard, he whaled one into the right field pavilion. Vosmik sealed the victory for the Indians in the eighth inning when, with two on base again, he drove a circuit clout against the left field fence.

Walberg, who started in the box for Boston, drove in four runs, his double scoring two in the first inning and his single knocking in another in the fifth.

Boston made four errors and seven of Cleveland's runs were unearned.

The Red Sox rallied in the last half of the ninth inning, but just fell short of tying the score. Holland dropped Cissell's fly and R. Johnson, pinch hitting, singled. Both runners advanced on a wild throw and then Judge, batting for Welland, drove a long fly to Holland on which Cissell scored. The rally died when Bishop whiffed and Werber grounded out to first base.

Virginia Trackmen Meet Navy Tomorrow

Charlottesville, Va., May 10 (Spl.). The University of Virginia track team will journey to the Naval Academy Saturday for a dual meet with the Midshipmen. This meet will bring to a close the Cavaliers' season of dual meets. The Cavaliers emerged victorious in the Big Four State championship meet last Saturday and give promise of pressing a well-balanced Middy track team. Coach Archie Hahn will count on his veteran stars—Capt. George Coles, in the shot put and discus; Grover Everett in the hurdles; Hunsdon Cary in the half-mile, and Jim Stipe in the javelin—to pile up winning points.

The Cavaliers will be opposed by a record-breaking array of Middy stars, consisting of Waybright and Hutchinson, in the running events, and Decker and Johnson in the field events.

Nats Seeking Pitcher of Browns

Hornsby Willing to Deal but Refuses to Make Trade for Cash.

Blaeholder Is Sought; Stewart and Hadley on Mound Today.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

TRADE winds, baseball trade winds, rode into Griffith Stadium yesterday on the tail of the gale that swept rain-laden clouds over the ball park where they deposited their watery cargo just in time to prevent the first pitch, or any other pitch.

Manager Roger Hornsby, of the Browns, made a dash for it through the pelting rain to the sanctum of Clark Griffith where he was closeted with Griffith and Manager Cronin, of the Nats, for more than an hour, but no announcements of a definite deal were forthcoming.

But all parties concerned are known to be in a trading mood, particularly Griffith, who needs another pitcher like the Department of Justice needs Dillinger. George Blaeholder, the big right-hander of the Browns, had been the object of Griffith's designs for the past four seasons, but Hornsby would listen to no trade for that young man.

"Griffith talks trade empty-handed," said Hornsby. "He doesn't have any trading material to offer, and we won't sell for cash. I'll trade anybody on my club if it's a worth-while deal, but we want something in return."

Nats Need Pitchers.

The Browns last winter put in a claim for Pitcher Bobby Burke, the Nats' perennial rookie, when Griffith asked waivers on Burke, and they would take him now at the waiver price, but Griffith is not aiming to dispose of any pitchers. It's pitchers that the Nats need and Griffith is in the market for one on a cash basis deal.

Heeding Manager Cronin's frantic shouts for more pitching, Griffith will soon embark on a scouting trip in an effort to corral a hurler or two from the waiver lists that all clubs must submit by May 15 when they must pare their rosters to the 23-player limit.

The Nats, too, face the problem of ridding themselves of three players over the limit, wtih the likelihood that the total wil be four if Alec McColl is ercalled from Chattanooga. The transfer of Johnny Kerr from the playing list to a coach's status will lop off one player, and Rookie Pitcher Mark Filley is slated to return to Albany.

Klumpp in Background.

Indications are that Rookie Catcher Elmer Klumpp's days with the Nats are numbered for the time being. With the acquisition of Catcher Eddie Phillips from Chattanooga, Klumpp is shoved into the background. Manager Cronin planned to put Phillips into the line-up yesterday and he will start him today in deference to his experience, an asset that Klumpp lacked. Klumpp doubtless will go back to Chattanooga on 24-hour recall option.

Rippy Upsets Vinson in Tourney

O'Brien Defeats Pitt; Peacock and Shorey in Semifinals.

By Dave Herman.

BRANDISHING a set of highly destructive golf clubs, Claude Rippy, 21-year-old Washington public links sensation, came striding across the water-logged Indian Spring Country Club course yesterday evening to explode the hopes of Gene Vinson, former Mississippi open amateur champion, and supply the most terrific upset of the opening day of match play in the club's invitation tournament.

Rippy, the former Shelby (N. C.) golfer, who budded into prominence last year by going to the finals of the District municipal championship, defeated Vinson, now a member of the aMnor Club, 1 up, to march into the semifinals along with the medalist, Don O'Brien, of Georgetown University; Roger Peacock, favorite from the host club, and John Shorey, of Kenwood, the former "boy wonder" of District golf, now bounding back into old-time form.

O'Brien Wins Matches.

O'Brien started off the day in a whirl of glory by defeating the defending champion and winner of the Belle Haven and Washington invitation tournaments, Harry Pitt, Manor, 3 and 1. Then in the afternoon he overcame Bradley Burrows, another municipal threat, by the same count, shooting eight straight pars after trailing at the turn.

Fast regaining his stride, the curly-haired Peacock, Maryland State amateur champion, eliminated W. Beverly Mason, jr., tall Chevy Chase golfer, 3 and 2, and set a killing pace to blast Tommy Webb, jr., of Washington Golf and Country Club, out of the picture in the afternoon with a 6 and 5 victory. After sticking close to par in his morning match, Peacock put the pressure on Webb, and played the 13 holes in 1 under standard figures.

Shorey Routs Sutherland.

But it seems as though Shorey provided the real scoring punch with his 7 and 6 victory over Maj. Richard K. Sutherland, Army and Navy's Big Bertha. Sutherland basked in the spotlight in the morning, when he put out Martin F. McCarthy, Beaver Dam's favorite, 1 up, for the first of the day's upsets. When he met up with Shorey it was a different story. Shorey gave a steady exhibition in defeating Walter Tynan, of Georgetown, in his first match, but he went on a scoring rampage against Sutherland and shot the first nine in 32 strokes, 3 under par, with the aid of four birdies.

Sutherland himself was just a few shots over par, but found himself 7 down at the turn. When Shorey ended the match on the twelfth green he was on 3 under par. Sutherland admitted he knew how Voigt felt when he shot subpar golf in the National Amateur at Five Farms, and yet lost in the face of Ouimet's 30.

Woodberry Triumphs.

Woodberry Forest, Va., May 10 (Spl.).—Woodberry Forest School defeated Portsmouth High School here today in both golf and tennis. The visitors won only one of eight matches played in tennis. The golf score was 17 to 1. Blanchard, playing No. 1 man for Portsmouth, scored the only point made by his team.

Cavalcade Likely Preakness Starter

Smith Plans to Enter High Quest Also; Fair and Cooler Is Weather Prediction; Discovery Among Other Expected Competitors.

BALTIMORE, May 10 (AP).—The United States Weather Bureau and the trainer of last week's Kentucky Derby winner made announcements today that brought forecasts of a great day for the thousands expected to witness the forty-fourth annual running of the Preakness at Pimlico Saturday.

Fair and cooler, said the weather man.

Cavalcade probably will run, said Bob Smith, who trains Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan's stable. So will High Quest, winner of the Wood Memorial.

With the Sloane horses entered, there seemed little doubt that the cream of the Nation's 3-year-olds—a highly select if somewhat small equine company of eight or nine—would compete for the Woodlawn vase and the $25,000 added purse.

Discovery Will Start.

Probable competitors, in addition to Cavalcade and High Quest, included Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Discovery, second in the Derby; Mrs. J. Frank Heller's Agrarian, third at Louisville and in the money in his last 13 races; Norman Church's Risculus; Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's Time Supply; Greentree Stable's Spy Hill; George Willing, jr.s, Swiftsport, and Houghton P. Metcalf's Snappy Story.

There may be others but probably not more than one or two. In any event, the handicappers have figured the winners in the nine named, with Cavalcade, High Quest and Discovery probably being the favorites in the betting.

Baltimore today was enjoying an acute case of Preakness fever. The temperatures of the sporting populace, which is large in the Maryland metropolis, has been rising steadily since the Derby. Pimlico officials, cheered at the large crowd at Louisville, believe the track capacity will be taxed to the limit and already are mourning the fact that they can not accommodate more.

Reserved Seats Sold Out.

Every reserved seat was sold weeks ago. The last box went on May 2. A minor crisis occurred the other day when Mrs. Sloane, mistress of Cavalcade, asked to have a box reserved when there were no boxes left. The directors solved it, however, by giving her their own.

Mrs. Sloane's Cavalcade and High Quest, along with her Anarcky, another possible starter, will be shipped to Baltimore from Belmont tomorrow.

Reports from New York today were to the effect that in final trials Cavalcade had worked a mile and an eighth in 1:54 2-5 this morning, without competition, and that High Quest had stepped the distance in 1:54-1-5, five lengths ahead of Anarcky. The other favorite, Discovery, did a mile and a quarter in 2:10 at the Vanderbilt farm in Green Spring Valley.

Cards Win 11th Out of 12 as Giants Bow

5-to-4 Victory Nets Third-Place Tie; Alert Base Running Decides.

ST. LOUIS, May 10 (AP).—The Cardinals climbed into a tie with the New York Giants, recently National League leaders, for third place in the standing and a virtual tie with the second-place Pittsburgh club today as they defeated the Giants 5 to 4 for their eleventh triumph in 12 games. All three clubs trail the pace-setting Chicago Cubs by 1½ games.

Jim Mooney, relieving Bill Hallahan in the fourth, held the Giants to four hits and one run in the last six innings to win the game.

Conference Costly.

Pepper Martin stole second while Pitcher Hal Schumacher and Blondy Ryan held a confab in the pitchers' box in the fifth and scored on Jack Rothrock's single to knot the count. In the next inning St. Louis went ahead when Ryan elected to try for Medwick at the plate instead of a double play and his throw was late.

Six Circuit Hits As Cubs Beat Dodgers

Klein's Eighth of Season Helps in Chicago's 12-8 Victory.

CHICAGO, May 10 (AP).—A strong wind blew across Wrigley Field today, wafting high-hit balls toward the right-field bleachers, and as a result the Cubs and Dodgers collected three home runs apiece as Chicago pounded out a 12-to-8 victory. This circuit-swatting spell, capped by Chuck Klein's eighth homer of the season, followed one which produced seven homers yesterday.

The home-run hitting started in the fourth inning when Gabby Hartnett pasted his sixth of the season with two mates on base to cap a four-run rally that gave Chicago a 6-to-0 lead. The Dodgers came right back and Linus Frey, Sam Leslie and Tony Cuccinello all hit for four bases, each time with the corners vacant.

Herman Gets One.

Billy Herman started the home half of the fifth with a homer that drove Owen Carroll off the hill.

Leslie Munns replaced him and was tapped for four more runs before the inning ended, but from then on he and Ray Lucas checked the Chicago batters except when Klein clouted his homer in the eighth.

Brooklyn pounded Lon Warneke for 16 hits, but outside of the three homers the Dodgers couldn't do any scoring until the seventh.

Wales to See Walker Cup Tee-Off

British Switch Big Guns on Ouimet and Dunlap.

By Gayle Talbot.

ST. ANDREWS, SCOTLAND, May 10 (AP).—On the eve of the eighth renewal of international golf competition between the United States and Britain, historic auld St. Andrews was aflutter tonight what with the Walker Cup matches and the Prince of Wales about to make their appearances simultaneously tomorrow.

The sportsman-prince and his usual entourage are expected to reach the famous course in time to watch the Scotch foursome combinations tee off at 10 a. m. and remain through the singles warfare Saturday.

There was much hustling and bustling about the hotel where the American Walker Cup players are staying, shifting customers from room to room in order to provide cozy quarters for the Prince's party.

Team Not Excited.

Only slightly excited over the impending visit of royalty, most of the Americans spent the afternoon in automobiles, touring around the vicinity, taking in various and sundry castles.

The principal point of interest was Cortachy Castle, where the ghostly drummer boy popularly is supposed to appear and beat his instrument vigorously when a member of the Earl of Airlie family dies.

While the visitors took an educational interest in the castle and its fable, a local wag suggested to Capt. Francis Ouimet and his golf brigade that they might encounter inside an apparition which would mean a death knell for their hopes of stretching Uncle Sam's string of consecutive victories over the British to eight.

British Squad Strong.

What the Americans have to fear more than ghosts is the strong British team they will face in tomorrow's matches. Many American supporters expressed the belief tonight that the Hon. Michael Scott, veteran British captain, had outfoxed and outgeneralled Ouimet both in teaming up available talent and numbering the pairs.

Scott apparently anticipated Johnny Goodman, U. S. open champion, and W. Lawson Little, burly Californian, would be America's No. 1 team, and considered them an unbeatable combination, so he threw his hottest pair, Eric McRuvie and Jack McLean into second place against Ouimet and George T. Dunlap, jr., sandy-haired American amateur titleholder. Goodman and Little were drawn against Cyril Tolley and Roger Wethered.

Odds Switch to Even.

The other pairs were Gus Moreland and Jack Westland, United States, versus Harry Bentley and Eric Fiddian, Great Britain; and Max Marston and Chandler Egan, United States, versus Scott and Sam McKinlay. Johnny Fischer is the spare of the American side, and Leonard Crawley and Tony Torrance on the British.

Betting on the foursomes, which had been favoring the Americans at odds of 3 to 2, quickly switched to even money upon receipt of the foursome pairings. Singles pairings will be announced tomorrow.

A bright sun and strong winds which the weather man promises will prevail both days also served to jack up Britain's hopes somewhat. The large greens are again baked hard and lightning fast.

Seven-Year-Old Gelding, in First Race Track Start, Jumps and Runs to Victory

Steeplechase Won by Our Friend

Victor Pays $42.70 at Pimlico; Battleship Close Loser.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, May 10.—Discovered, the Chase Me of steeplechase circles. For the best part of seven years, a gelding by the name of Our Friend has been munching oats, rollicking in the fields down in Ole Virginny and jumping stone walls and rail fences. Until today he had never been near a race track. But when the running and jumping in the Billy Barton Steeplechase, the spring timber-topping feature, Our Friend went to the front never to be headed and the vast majority of the 10,000 watchers would not have been more surprised had old Billy Barton himself, which led the field to the start, suddenly decided to sneak into the competition.

Our Friend, ridden by Noel Laing, who won the race with Annapolis in 1931, finished 20 lengths ahead of B. L. Behr's Outlaw, which had a three-length advantage over Areska, from the W. E. Doeller barn.

Sets Fast Pace.

It was a luck victory for Our Friend but a deserving one in that the gelding set a pace that at times was stretched out to a sixteenth of a mile.

It was at the last jump that Our Friend, owned by Mrs. Verner Z. Reed, jr., received the "break" that made the difference between first and second money. C. K. Bassett, riding the favorite, Battleship, had confidently held his charge back in the field and with two of the 19 fences left, began a drive at the leader. Our Friend was obviously tiring and Battleship went over the last brush pile almost with the leader. Our Friend made a perfect jump but Battleship slid on one hoof and staggered over on his nose. There was no other horse even close and Laing merely trotted Our Friend to the finish line.

A light rain, which began during the second race, left the course treacherous. An occasional flash of lightning scampered across the darkened sky.

Draws Away From Field.

Our Friend steadily drew away from the field during the first two turns of the course. Both Kim and Drapeau, which tried to overhaul the leader, were the first of the field of six to tire. Outlaw made a futile attempt to dislodge Our Friend on the last swing but the ultimate winner continued his excellent jumping and his long stride on the flat. It was not until Battleship made his move that there was any semblance of competition for the front runner.

ORTHOPRISM, away in the first flight, and having good speed, raced GAY BLADE and HAPPY TOM into defeat, saved ground when in command, and was best under urging until the end. NERVY NELLA worked her way up on the outside, and then finished with good courage. GAY BLADE was ridden hard from the beginning, and had no excuses. HAPPY TOM went forwardly but tired fast in the final drive. TRULY YOURS, slow to get going, finished stoutly in the late stages. GUNWALE was unable to threaten the leaders. BE THERE was held safe. LITTLE WACKIE had brief early speed. LA YAGA broke well, but was shuffled back going to the turn.

WATERSET improved her position gradually. FRONT lacked early foot. He closed gamely when settled in his stride. SINGLE A. stopped badly in the last five-sixteenths. OLD DEPOT, allowed to settle into his best stride after racing far back, moved into contention with a bold rush, swung to the outside when taking command and then finished with something in reserve. PELHAM placed forwardly, was put to a hard drive in the last half-mile, and held on courageously. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA JONES, $12.20, $5.50, $4.10; GOLDEN DREAM, $9.20, $5.80; TEN LAW, $6.20.

JUSTA JONES, in closest attendance of NANKIN, went into an easy lead approaching the home stretch when the pacemaker swerved out, was hard ridden thereafter, and outstayed Golden Dream. Latter, allowed to drop out of contention shortly after the start, came through on the inside during the stretch run, and closed willingly TEN LAW went strongly but was not good enough. VICARESS finished with a rush on the outside. MADDENING broke very slowly. She closed fast when settled in her stride. NANKIN displayed high speed, but ran out rounding the turn.

BUN D., slower than usual to get into full stride, worked her way up on the outside when moving into contention, wore GRAND ACRE down when straightened into the home stretch and was moving clear slowly. GRAND ACRE, going in improved fashion, crowded over on KING BIRD at the first turn, was rated in front until challenged, and continued gamely when displaced. HOBNAIL raced close up from the beginning, and then held on well. KING BIRD, squeezed back at the first turn, was kept forwardly placed, and then fought it out gamely. CHANGEABLE could not stay when the real issue came AIRWAY was outrun. HACKY H. would not extend himself, and was eased up when beaten.

STEELHEAD, hurried into a brief lead going to the first turn, was rated until reaching the home stretch and then went to a hard drive. At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Pimlico Race Track, May 10.

Sonny Workman has his ups and downs. To date he has ridden 15 winners at this meeting, but it only takes one mistake to make him a "bum" in the eyes of the turf crowd. Today he was booed with such volume that the raspberry probably was heard as far South as Laurel because Maddening, a favorite, failed to leave the starting gate with the rest of the field. Twice Halycon has done the same trick with Workman in the saddle. However, the Whitney campaign is notorious for being left at the post. Workman is in rare form these days and is riding hard for both millionaires and halter owners. When he came out astride Hacky H. in the seventh race, the Washington boy was the target for all kinds of verbal abuse. He made the mistake, however, of talking back to the crowd. He was heckled all along the rail and he plainly showed he can't take it. At least, in the manner that professional ball players turn a deaf ear to such remarks.

BILL.

First race—Red Run was overmatched in his last out and backed up after showing early speed. Seems better suited among these and I expect Merritt to pilot this one home. Dixie Bee and Par Value to take care of the others.

Second race—Chewsie appears to have found the right spot in this sprint. This colt is on the improve and is another Merritt mount. Sun Teaparty has threatened to score and is dangerous. Mud would improve the chances of Westy's Duke.

Third race—Spinach turned in a victory last week for the Bennings interests. Although the mutuel tomorrow will hardly match the last, 9-5 will be better than a loser. Depart and Matagain have the edge on the others.

Fourth race—Wise Mollie, if sent back, may surprise by taking this purse. Gets in with light weight and can better today's performance. Vacillate would prefer a lightning track and will be dangerous should the weather clear. Belle Fille for the show.

Sixth race—Banners Flying gets the Bennings call here. Just failed to beat Firelock the last time they met. I expect the order to be reversed tomorrow. Gitapp for the show.

Seventh race—Modern Times finds a field here that may be picked up in the stretch run. The veteran is good now. Pencader and Brad for the other awards. The last named was sharpened in a sprint today.

Interstate League Suspends 4 Men

Players Appeared With Other Organizations.

Cumberland, Md., May 10 (Spl.). Four amateur baseball players who appeared in the line-ups of Cumberland and Georges Creek and Potomac Valley League clubs after signing contracts with Interstate League clubs have been suspended for the season in the latter circuit by President Woodward Dyche.

They are John Hardinger, who played with the Cumberland Colts of the C. and G. C. circuit while under contract to Potomac Edison; Fred "Tack" Clark, also of the Colts, under contract to the Eagles, and Sammy DeLuca and Fred Kaboskey, who played with the Celanese Spinners of the Potomac Valley loop while under contract to the B. and C.

Several other players whose names are on the Interstate League contracts have been listed on the rosters of teams in the other loops, Dyche said, and they will be suspended whenever proof is furnished of their competition.

If you climbed the HIGHEST MOUNTAIN

—by rail, that is, you'd go up the special railroad that mounts Pike's Peak. This unique railway climbs the steep slopes by the surest principle of traction known—by the cogwheel method — U. S. Tires feature this same principle for the very same purpose—to provide you with positive traction under the most adverse conditions.

You'll need no technical knowledge to appreciate the advantage of this principle—of mere glance at the U. S. Cogwheel Tread will convince you of its road-gripping qualities.

U. S. Tire Tread utilizes the cogwheel principle of traction—as used in the famous Pike's Peak climb.

What a glance does not disclose, however, is that this tread is made of Tempered Rubber, the toughest, slowest wearing tire-rubber ever developed—and underneath it is the extra strength of U. S. Safety Bonded cord body, the greatest security against blowouts known.

Super-quality needn't mean extra cost—look at these prices!

Stocks Plunge To New Lows; Rally Cuts Loss

New York, May 10 (AP).—Stocks plunged to new lows for 1934 today before the violent rise in the Chicago wheat pit finally changed the trend in the share market.

The drop in shares during the morning ranged from 1 to 5 points in many issues, which carried industrial price averages to the lowest since December, but selling slackened by midday, and there was a substantial rally during the early afternoon as wheat soared.

Losses were fully regained in some instances, and more than half regained in several. The list soon turned dull, however, and slid off a little before the close, when net losses of 1 to 3 points were numerous.

Loss of 1.9 Points.

The Standard Statistics price average of 90 leading stocks showed a net loss of 1.9 points, closing at 76.6, which was the lowest closing level since December 26. The 1934 high of 93.8 was reached February 5. The day's turnover of 2,132,410 shares, with the exception of last Monday's volume, was the largest in weeks.

The upswing in the wheat market, which finally reached the 5-cent limit permitted in one day, appeared to make shorts nervous in stocks, and prompted considerable short covering around midday. American Telephone, in which there had been short selling in anticipation of a possible dividend reduction, bounded up to show a gain of more than 2 points over yesterday's final price, but lost half its gain by the close.

Wall street sentiment remained highly confused, and chart readers thought the fact that several issues broke through the lower resistance points established Monday was a bad sign. On the other hand, some usually well-informed circles reported that good investment buying on scale down had finally reappeared in the market. Corporate or business news developments were meager. United States Steel's shipments of finished steel, as announced for April, were 643,009 tons, up 54,800 from March, and the best since last August.

Brokerage Quarters Gloomy.

Brokerage quarters were gloomy over the large vote accorded the proposed amendment to the Fletcher-Rayburn bill in the Senate to forbid marginal trading entirely, although it failed of passage. Some thought this indicated a strong sentiment for stiff margin requirements, however deflationary they may prove to be.

The breadth of the early selling was evident from sharp recessions in a number of preferred stocks and in several comparatively inactive common issues. Among more prominent issues, Case was a wide loser early, getting down about 5, although this was cut to 2 points, finally. Allied Chemical, once off about 4, was down little more than a point at the close.

Issues of 1 to 2 points at the close included American Can, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Dupont, General Motors, Loews, Norfolk & Western, Pennsylvania, Nash, Union Carbide and U. S. Steel. Santa Fe lost about 3. Utilities were under less pressure than recently, and held up fairly well. U. S. Smelting closed up about a point and Radio preferred B finished 2 higher.

The weekly bank statements showed a decline of $27,000,000 in brokers' loans, which was considered as modest in view of the downward trend of the market during the past week. New York City member banks' showed a decline in loans and investments of $87,000,000. Their investments in U. S. Governments increased $28,000,000, and other investments were lower.

Increase in Bank Deposits Reflects Our Progress Along the Road of Inflation—Recent Growth Phenomenal.

By Ralph West Robey.

It still is widely believed that, although the Administration has taken various steps that were interpreted as inflationary, actually we have had no inflation. To prove that this is the case two arguments are used: First, that the volume of currency in circulation is lower today than it was a year ago; secondly, that bank loans have not increased, or, more generally, that there has been no expansion of credit. Neither argument is relevant at present. The test of inflation in this country under the present regime is not the volume of money in circulation or the volume of bank loans, but rather is the volume of bank deposits. If one examines this he finds that during the last few months we have experienced a substantial inflation.

To get actual current figures on this one must rely upon the statements of the weekly reporting member banks. These institutions are located in 91 of our leading cities and their resources compose between 40 and 50 per cent of the total assets of the entire banking system. Changes in their position, therefore, while not necessarily exactly representative of what is happening in the banking system as a whole, may be taken as a rather conclusive indication of the general trend.

Increase Has Averaged $70,000,000 a Week.

A year ago these reporting member banks had net demand deposits of some $10,350,000,000. There was a rapid run-up of the amount until the middle of June, the total rising to $11,200,000,000, then an even more rapid decline of about $500,000,000. Following this the amount remained reasonably steady, although with a downward trend, until the first part of November. Since then the increase has been continuous, except for temporary drops for one week at a time, and in the aggregate has been phenomenal.

Thus, on November 8, 1933, the volume of these deposits was $10,531,000,000. On May 2, 1934, the last date for which figures are available, it was $12,221,000,000. This is an increase of $1,690,000,000 in just six months. On a weekly basis it means an average increase of $70,000,000.

Now consider what this means. Between the middle of 1914 and the middle of 1920 individual deposits in all banks in the United States increased $19,000,000,000. This was an average weekly increase of $61,000,000, or nine millions a week less than the increase of the last six months in less than one-half of our banking system. During this period 1914-1920 the wholesale commodity price index increased from 100 to 250.

In Twenties Increase Was One $43,000,000 a Week.

Between June 30, 1921, and June 30, 1929 deposits in all banks increased $18,000,000,000. This was an average weekly increase of $43,000,000 or $37,000,000 less than the average for the last six months in less than one-half of our banking system. During this period it was stock prices that skyrocketed.

During these earlier periods there was a simultaneous increase of loans and discounts by the banks. That, however, was because it was through these means that the deposits were being originated. Today this function is being performed to an unusual degree by the Government. In other words, the Government now borrows from the banks, lends or gives the proceeds to its beneficiaries and these or recipients further removed then, sooner or later, make deposits in the banks. The process is a bit more roundabout, and takes a little time, but it amounts to the same thing in the long run. That this is what is taking place to a large extent is evident from the fact that since the low point of last fall the reporting member banks have increased their holding of Government bonds by $1,270,000,000.

It seems clear to me, therefore, that those who were working along under the belief that we are not having any inflation need to revise their opinions. It has not been giving us run-away speculative markets, it is true, but inflation in the early stages normally does not have such an effect. That comes later.

Liquidation Fails to Hold Curb Down

Utilities and Metals Revive as Transfers Climb to 258,000 Shares.

New York, May 10 (AP).—Another flurry of selling forced the curb market lower today, but prices recovered substantially in a rebound later. Utilities and metals came back well, although some of the specialities failed to respond.

The list was easier from the start and selling predominated into the noon period. Pressure lifted around the start of the fourth hour and a brief recovery occurred later in that period.

Down Chemical lost 6 points to close at 85. General Tire & Rubber and Natomas Co. each ended around 4 points lower. Newmont Mining cancelled a 3-point decline while other metals ended generally steady.

American Gas & Electric erased a point loss and Electric Bond & Share finished off a shade after holding rather narow most of the day. Hiram Walker came back strongly but losses of 1 to around 2 points persisted to the last in Sherwin Williams, Pan-American Airways, Aluminum Co. of America and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Greyhound Corporation improved more than a point in a substantial turnover.

Transfers approximated 258,000 shares compared with 177,000 yesterday.

Berry Begins 51st Year With Perpetual Building

Perpetual Building Association's president, James Berry, is receiving the compliments of his many friends and acquaintances in the celebration of 50 years of close contact with the association. It was in 1884 that Mr. Berry became connected with the Perpetual, first as an active share subscriber, later as a member of the association's loan committee, and finally as president.

In his official connection with the Perpetual, Mr. Berry has the distinction of serving it continuously 30 years. Under his leadership the Perpetual Building Association has made steady and consistent progress and is today the largest building and loan organization in the city, having assets in excess of $32,500,000.

Federal Bonds Capture Peaks; Others Decline

Averages DropFour-tenths; Turnover Climbs to $18,201,000.

New York, May 10 (AP).—United States Treasury securities again proved the sustaining influence in a rather shaky bond market today and ten of the Governments stepped into new high territory for the past year or more.

Including a turnover of some $7,400,000 in Federal issues, against about $4,000,000 yesterday, the day's total transactions in all listed loans amounted to $18,201,000, par value.

This was comparable with an aggregate of $12,815,000 in the previous session. The average for 60 domestic corporate bonds sagged four-fifths of a point, to 86.

Secondary Rails Lower.

While most industrial issues were fairly steady, secondary rails and utilities gave way to further liquidation, apparently inspired by the sharp decline in equities. There was little in the news of paramount interest to the market as a whole.

The demand for Treasury bonds centered in the 3⅜s and about $2,500,000 of these changed hands. The Home Loan and Federal Farm issues were slightly higher, as were the uncalled Liberty Fourth 4¼s. Advances in the Federal section ranged from four thirty-seconds of a point.

Among the few firm corporation loans were some of American Telephone, Armour & Co., Chesapeake & Ohio, North American, Pennsylvania, and Union Pacific.

List of Losers.

Losers of 1 to 2 or more points included issues of Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Childs Co., Colorado Industrial, Columbia Gas, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, International Telephone, Missouri Pacific, New Orleans Public Service, Nickel Plate, Otis Steel, Paramount, Philadelphia Co., Postal Telegraph, Frisco, Southern Pacific, Tobacco Products, Wabash, Warner Bros. and Western Union.

Obligations of Paris Orleans, Tokyo City, Warsaw, Panama and Canada improved fractionally to around 2 points. Government loans of Japan and Germany lost a point or more.

Committee of Nation's Evidence Of Gold Lifting as Cure Assailed

By Anna P. Youngman.

In a statement issued a few days ago, the committee for the Nation asserted that the policy of increasing the price of gold has fully justified the predictions of its sponsors and is the dynamic force which has lifted us thus far out of the depression. Consequently, the committee concludes that all that is needed to restore economic balance and bring prosperity is to continue raising the price of gold until the 1926 level of commodity prices has been restored.

As "irrefutable" proof that the dollar price of gold controls the dollar price of basic commodities, a chart is presented, showing the course of gold prices and the average price at wholesale of 30 basic commodities from February, 1933, to April, 1934, compiled by the Journal of Commerce.

Great significance is believed to attach to the fact that the advance in commodity prices as measured by the selected wholesale price index amounted to 67 per cent between February, 1933, and February, 1934, while the price of gold advanced 69 per cent during the same period.

Gold and Prices.

The superficial correspondence between gold and commodity prices shown by the chart is undeniably striking, but it does not justify the conclusion that it provides "irrefutable" proof of the success of the policy of raising gold prices. In the first place the Journal of Commerce index covers only 30 selected commodities, many of which—coffee, rubber, cotton, tin, sugar, &c.—enter into international trade and have their prices determined in world markets. Since the depreciation in the exchange value of the dollar after abandonment of the gold standard provided the only measurement of changes in the price of gold in terms of the paper dollar, it is not in the least surprising that an index largely composed of commodities dealt in on world markets should have shown a sensitive response to variations in the external value of the dollar. Incidentally, the higher prices paid for imported goods, not produced at all in the United States, such as coffee and rubber, are not conducive to restoration of domestic economic balance and prosperity.

There are, however, other objections to this method of testing the efficacy of a rise in gold prices. It leaves out of consideration a vast range of domestic prices which have not shown a tendency to advance pari passu with rising gold prices. The comprehensive Bureau of Labor index of wholesale commodity prices, for example, has risen approximately 20 per cent during the past year and at the end of April it was only 2½ per cent above the high point of last November.

Erratic Price Behavior.

Moreover, no account is taken of the erratic price behavior of individual commodities in comparing changes in a price index with variations in gold prices. Leo Pasvolsky, in a book on "Current Monetary Issues," made a detailed study of changes in the dollar prices of 16 important individual commodities and groups of commodities and compared those changes with gold price movements for the period April-November, 1933. During those months the price indexes of certain commodity groups—coal and chemicals—actually declined, while extraordinarily diverse fluctuations were recorded in quotations for rubber, wheat, cotton, hides.

These changes and others bore no ascertainable relation to the movements of gold prices, but the most extreme variations occurred in sensitive and speculative international commodities naturally affected by unstable exchanges.

The Committee for the Nation rather naively emphasizes the fact that sensitive commodities anticipated advances in gold prices as well as declines. That, of course, is merely evidence that speculative buying is stimulated by an unstable currency.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Textiles—In rayon and wool trade circles there is considerable gossip about curtailment of manufacturing operations, and some interests in the former are said to look for organized restriction in view of the reduced scale of weavers' operations.

Quicksilver—There has been no apparent increase in domestic production, say trade interests, in spite of the sharp upturn in prices during the past year. Quotations are currently $76 and $78 a flask.

Paint materials—The sensational advance in shellac for spot deliveries continued this week, lifting prices to new high levels. Foreign markets have been correspondingly strong. Most of the pigments show an advancing trend under seasonally improved demand.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

The position of the Treasury May 8 was: Receipts, $9,404,236.16; expenditures, $47,911,968.05; balance, $2,179,152,114.77; customs receipts for the month, $5,715,545.78.

Foreign Markets.

London, May 10 (A.P.)—Affected by the approaching settlement day, business on the stock exchange was restricted today. Gilt-edged securities and German bonds were dull, while West African gold-mining shares improved. Rubber stocks eased on profit-taking, and transatlantic issues were unsettled. The market closed irregular.

Bank Rate Unchanged.

New York, May 10 (A.P.)—The New York Federal Reserve Bank announced no change today in the rediscount rate of 1½ per cent.

April Steel Shipments Increase 54,800 Tons

Wheat Jumps 5-Cent Limit In Wild Buying

Speculators Rush Market, Driving Price to 90⅜; All Grains Up.

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—Excited speculative buying rushed the wheat market up late today to within 10 cents of the farmer's old-time ideal—$1 a bushel.

A jump of 5 cents, the maximum limit allowed for wheat in any one day, was witnessed. Oats also rose the limit—3 cents for that grain.

Sensational unofficial crop damage advices and prospective widening of drought areas, with dust clouds darkening huge stretches from the Rockies to the Alleghenies, were back of the buying stampede.

In addition, there was general expectance that the Government May crop report, due after the close of today's trading, would indicate severe curtailment of 1934 wheat harvest figures.

Maximum Rise Holds.

The day's maximum advance for wheat was held at the last, with the close feverish, 4⅞ to 5 cents above yesterday's finish; corn, 1⅞ to 2⅛ up; oats, 2½ to 2¾ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

Today's rise in wheat prices marked the first time since October 17 that the maximum on the upside had been reached. Incidentally, prices were up nearly 19 cents since the low made in April.

Full momentum of the buying flurry in wheat came only at the approach of the final hour. Previously, the market had shown unmistakable strength, but in the face of lively profit-taking and of concentrated selling that totaled at one time 1,500,000 bushels in a few minutes the rise of prices amounted to less than 3 cents. Around midday, however, purchase orders took on immense proportions with the rise of prices irresistible until halted by the arbitrary stoppage enforced by exchange rules.

Crop Report Bullish.

After the Government crop report was received, most grain traders construed the showing as decidedly bullish, the indicated production of winter wheat, 461,471,000 bushels being 25,000,000 bushels below the average of recent private estimates.

The official report was also generally taken as implying heavy additional damage had been done since the time the Government data was gathered ten days ago, with excessively hot dry weather intervening.

Much of today's buying of wheat was attributed to dispatches from a leading private expert, who wired from Holdedge, Nebr., after a 200-mile trip from Belleville, Kans., via York, Nebr., that fully 30 per cent of wheat fields seen were now a total failure owing to lack of subsoil moisture. He said the remaining 70 per cent was failing fast, but could yield half a crop if good rains came soon.

Corn and oats prices mainly reflected the action of wheat. There was decided improvement of shipping demand for corn.

Provisions were influenced by the course both of hog values and of grains.

Effective May 3, the further importation into British India of mechanical lighters and flints therefor was entirely prohibited, according to a cablegram received in the Department of Commerce from Trade Commissioner G. April Department Store Sales

Preliminary figures on the value of department store sales show little change from March to April, when allowance is made for number of business days, for usual seasonal changes, and for changes in the date of Easter. The Federal Reserve Board's index was 76 in April on the basis of the 1923-1925 averages as 100, compared with 77 in March and 71 in February.

In comparison with a year ago, the value of sales for April, according to preliminary figures, was 5 per cent larger. Easter was earlier this year than last, so that this year's figures include no Easter shopping, while the figures for last year include two weeks of such trade. Reported increases compared with last year are shown for eight districts, the largest increases being in the Atlanta, Chicago and Dallas districts. The aggregate for the first four months of the year was 22 per cent larger than last year.

Loans to Brokers Decline $27,000,000

(Associated Press)

Loans to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting New York City Federal Reserve member banks amounted to $947,000,000 during the week ended May 9, representing a decrease of $27,000,000 for the week.

In making the announcement the Federal Reserve Board said loans for the week ended May 10, 1933, were $564,000,000.

Cotton Prices Rise Slightly in Mixed Trading

May Closes at 11.28 as General Market Rise 4 to 5 Points.

New York, May 10 (AP).—Cotton ended slightly higher after an irregular session today.

July, after selling off to 1.22 early, or about 27 points below yesterday's high, rallied to 11.45 and closed at 11.40, with the general market finishing steady at net advances of 4 to 5 points.

News from Washington on silver was not encouraging to the inflationists. Liquidation was quite active early in the session and there was some scattered selling here by houses with New Orleans or other Southern connections. The early declines in stocks and silver also were depressing influences.

After showing net losses of about 13 to 15 points during the early trading, prices steadied, and there were recoveries later in the day in some demand for Western account. December sold up from 11.49 to 11.73 in the late trading and closed at 11.68, or about 5 points off from the best under realizing.

Washington reports that silver discussions were continuing were interesting to the trade, but traders appeared to feel that more tangible developments were needed as a guide to market commitments.

G. M. Working Capital Totals $262,543,875

New York, May 10 (AP).—Net working capital of General Motors Corp. on March 31 amounted to $262,543,875, compared with $217,468,700 on the same day a year ago, the pamphlet report covering operations for the first quarter showed today.

As previously reported net earnings, including equities in the undivided profits or losses of subsidiary and affiliated companies not consolidated, totaled $27,024,968 after preferred dividend requirements, equal to 63 cents a common share. This compares with earnings of $6,870,007 in the first quarter of 1933, or 11 cents a common share.

Cash and marketable securities as of March 31 totaled $153,623,975 compared with $135,711,686 at the end of the first quarter in 1933.

There were 538,345 shares of the corporation's common stock held in the treasury on March 31 compared with 629,076 shares held a year ago on that date. This decrease, a statement by the company said, was accounted for by stock requirements of the employe benefit fund.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president, said in a statement to stockholders that General Motors was owned by 31,949 stockholders, 83 per cent having less than 50 shares each and that the number of large stockholders was rapidly decreasing and the number of persons owning a small number of shares was increasing. He said he believed such a trend "highly desirable."

Czechoslovakia's Steel Output Registers Rise

Increased activity in the iron and steel industry of Czechoslovakia is reported to the Commerce Department by Acting Commercial Attache Basil Dahl, Prague.

Production of pig iron during March amounted to 53,017 metric tons, an increase of 50 per cent over the preceding month and 29 per cent as compared with March, 1933. The output of crude steel in March reached 87,171 metric tons, an increase of 90 per cent over February and 35 per cent over March, 1933.

Power Output Drops.

New York, May 10 (AP).—Electric power output in the United States last week was 1,632,766,000 k. w. hours, comparing with 1,668,564,000 the previous week, the Edison Electric Institute reported. The increase over a year ago was 13.7 per cent.

Canadian Plant Completes Big Power Unit

Project Is First of Series in Upper Quebec; Work Started in 1930.

New York, May 10.—With the completion of its fourth unit of 40,000 horsepower at Rapide Blanc, the Shawinigan Water & Power Co., one of the four largest power distributors in the world, this week put into operation its new 160,000 horsepower hydro-electric plant, the first of a series of developments on the upper St. Maurice River in northern Quebec designed to yield eventually about a million horsepower. The project has been completed more than a year ahead of the original schedule.

The new development, which can be expanded to a capacity of 240,000 horsepower, was started in 1930. Work on the project was temporarily suspended during the winters of 1931-32 and 1932-33, but with the increase in the demand for power which developed last summer the company decided to rush the completion of the plant.

The first 40,000 horsepower unit was installed in February and two others were subsequently put into service.

With the full installation completed, the company has available from its own power plants a capacity of 809,200 electrical horsepower and 55,000 hydraulic horsepower, in addition to 110,000 horsepower purchased from other companies.

Produced at a low cost, this power is used by practically all of the industries in the industrial territory of Quebec.

Through its extensive undeveloped reserves on the upper St. Maurice, to be drawn upon only as needed, The Shawinigan Water & Power Co. has a potential capacity of more than 2,100,000 horsepower, all on a single river.

Its development at an exceptionally low cost is made possible by the natural adaptability of the St. Maurice to hydroelectric construction and control of the water supply through a system of storage reservoirs—one of them said to be the largest power reservoir in the world.

U. S. Supplies East With Newsprint

American Product Gains in China; Crowds Out Others.

The bulk of China's imports of newsprint is now supplied by American mills, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Assistant Commercial Attache A. Bland Calder, Shanghai. Formerly, the report points out, European mills, later Japan, and then Canada were leading suppliers of newsprint to China, but in the past year and a half the American product has been gaining a steady ascendency.

In low-priced sulphite bond paper Europe still dominates the Chinese market, but Pacific Coast mills can now quote competitively and are coming in for a share of this business. In the higher-grade papers of several categories, including bonds, banknote paper, and certain types of printing paper, the United States is the leading supplier. Relative to the whole paper trade, however, the volume of sales of quality paper is small.

In cigarette paper Italy supplied 24 per cent of the value of imports into China for January and February of the current year, with the United States ranking second with 22 per cent, followed by France, Great Britain, Japan and Poland. The value of imports of this type paper for the two months was approximately $265,000.

Largest European Flax Mill Opens

The largest flax mill in Europe has just begun operations in Gumbinnen, East Prussia, as a part of the governmental plan to provide additional employment, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Acting Commercial Attache Douglas Miller, Berlin.

The new mill will provide employment for approximately 100 men the year round and is to handle all the flax produced in East Prussia, the report states. The plant has been laid out on new lines covering an area of 200,000 square feet. A new retting process is in use, by which the time required for this operation is reduced to three or four hours, as against the former required time of from two to six weeks. The linen materials produced from these fibers are light in color and so strong that they cannot be torn by hand.

Production of Soft Coal Totals 6,350,000 Tons

The National Coal Association, from incomplete car loading reports from the railroads, estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended May 5 as approximately 6,350,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1933, 4,810,000 net tons; 1932, 4,534,000 tons.

The report of the Bureau of Mines shows production of 5,878,000 tons for the week ended April 21, and 6,340,000 (revised) for the week ended April 28, 1934.

Production calendar year to May 5, 1934, 133,261,000 tons (subject to revision); 1933, 102,212,000 tons.

Canada's Crop Outlook in '34 Called Gloomy

Dust Storms and Lack of Rain Menace Yields Over Wide Area.

Winnipeg, May 10 (AP).—Prairie farmers peered anxiously today at sky and soil.

The crop outlook was considered gloomy and indications were for a considerable reduction in acreage sown to wheat. Dust storms, lack of subsoil moisture, drought conditions in some sections, and the grave grasshopper menace were the chief grounds for pessimism.

Crop prospects on the prairies were described as "uncertain" by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Condition of fall wheat, 65 per cent of normal, was the lowest since 1918.

Elaborate preparations were going forward to stem the grasshopper invasion which last year took heavy toll of growing wheat.

Prevalence of dust storms, especially in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, caused many farmers to delay seeding. Others were compelled to reseed. Pulverized top soil has been whipped off many fields and lodged in ditches. Subsoil moisture has been insufficient and light rains have not succeeded in holding down the parched earth.

April rains were exceptionally light, although moisture over the past nine months was higher than usual, according to figures compiled at the Dominion Meteorological Observatory in Toronto. These rains during the seeding period are the most vital of all.

Fair, cool weather prevailed today across the prairies after dust storms, high winds and light rains had visited many areas. Even the rain was insufficient, however, to stop the dust from blowing at Brandon and points in eastern Saskatchewan. Forecasts held no hope of rain.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics predicted considerable reductions in spring wheat acreage throughout Canada. In Manitoba the reduction was calculated at 4 per cent, in Saskatchewan at 11 per cent and 5 per cent in Alberta. It was rated at almost 2,000,000 acres on the prairies.

Reserve Credits Average Cut; U. S. Gold Stocks Fail to Climb

(Associated Press.)

For the first time since devaluation, Government gold stocks failed to climb by as much as $1,000,000 during the past week.

The Federal Reserve Board today reported stocks of $7,756,000,000 on May 9, the same figure as for May 2. Treasury figures indicate an increase of several thousand, however, and the total increase since devaluation on January 31 was $738,000,000.

Surplus cash reserves of member banks again jumped past the $1,500,000,000 level with an increase in total reserves of $108,000,000. Of this increase, $73,000,000 was in New York.

Commercial Paper Handled.

Commercial paper bought and discounted by the banks dropped to a new low of $44,000,000.

The Reserve Board's condition report said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended May 9, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,484,000,000, a decrease of $6,000,000 compared with the preceding week and an increase of $136,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1933.

"On May 9 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,484,000,000, unchanged from last week. An increase of $108,000,000 in member bank reserve balances was offset by decreases of $79,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks, $23,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and $7,000,000 in money in circulation.

"The system's holdings of bills discounted and of bills bought in open market declined $1,000,000 each, and of United States Treasury notes $6,000,000, while holdings of Treasury certificates and bills increased $6,000,000.

Changes in Credits.

"Changes in the amount of Reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended May 9, 1934, were as follows (in millions of dollars):

Canada Leader Proposes Fixed Tobacco Prices

Ottawa, May 10 (AP).—Establishment of a top price for minimum grades of tobacco, together with a policy which would require growers to raise only certain types of leaf tobacco, were advocated as a means for improving the tobacco growing industry by Joseph Marion, Mayor of St. Jacques l'Achigan, Quebec, before the parliamentary mass buying and price spreads committee. Marion is both a grower and trader.

He told of petitions circulated throughout the counties of L'Assomption, Montcalm and Berthier by the large tobacco companies, favoring the imposition of a 20-cent excise tax on leaf tobacco sold to others than manufacturers. Ten cents a name was paid for signatures.

At the same time another petition opposing this tax was circulated, and, said Marion, "95 per cent of those who signed the first petition also signed the second one."

The effect of such a tax would have been to eliminate a large number of people handling the tobacco, centralizing control in the big manufacturing companies.

Stock Exchange Seats Sold at Lower Prices

New York, May 10 (AP).—Arrangements were completed today for the sale of two memberships in the New York Stock Exchange at substantial reductions from the previous sale.

The first announcement of the impending transfer of a seat at $125,000 was a decline of only $5,000 from the last reported sale, but within another hour arrangements had been completed for the sale of the second seat at $110,000, which was a drop of $20,000 from the last sale reported previous to the one earlier today.

Britain and France Seek Trade Treaty

London, May 10 (AP).—Negotiations have been begun between France and Great Britain, it was announced today, looking toward a new commerce and navigation treaty to replace those denounced by France in February after Britain imposed additional duties on her imports.

Pending conclusion of the new treaty, it was announced the old agreements will remain in effect, subject to two weeks' notice of termination by either side. The denunciation otherwise would become effective May 13.

It was pointed out that, so far as the navigation features are concerned, the two nations are parties to the Geneva Maritime Ports Convention of 1923 and would be governed by it in event of a termination of the old agreement, which dates back to 1826.

Half of Sugar In World Seen Under Curbs

13,625,000 Tons to Be Regulated or Otherwise Controlled.

New York, May 10.—Effective with the signing by President Roosevelt of the Jones-Costigan bill, more than half of the world's sugar crop will be regulated by restriction programs, according to Lamborn & Co.

World sugar production during the 1933-34 season is estimated at 25,694,000 long tons, raw-sugar value, of which 13,625,000 tons, or 53 per cent, will be controlled by government regulation or association action.

Under the International Sugar Agreement (commonly referred to as the Chadbourne plan) approximately 6,062,000 tons, or 24 per cent of the world's output, is under a restriction plan, according to Lamborn & Co. Nine countries (Cuba, Java, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, Belgium, Yugoslavia and Peru) are controlled by this international agreement.

Under the Jones-Costigan Act, approximately 4,995,000 long tons, raw-sugar value, over 19 per cent of the world's production, will be under U. S. Government direction. This figure includes production in Puerto Rico, Hawaii, Philippines, Virgin Islands and continental United States. Cuba, which is a member of the International Agreement, is not included in this figure.

Other countries, principally in South and Central America, make up the balance of 2,568,000 tons, or 10 per cent.

U. S. Optical Sales Drop in Argentina

American optical goods appear to be losing ground in the Argentine market, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Assistant Trade Commissioner Julian B. Smith, Buenos Aires.

Latest reports, Smith states, indicate that while the receipts of such merchandise by Argentina are increasing, imports from the United States are steadily declining. Imports of American optical lenses in 1933 amounted to only 4,208 dozen pairs, as against 5,906 dozen and 8,669 dozen pairs in the two years immediately preceding.

In the spectacle frame line, the report points out, the picture is equally as pessimistic. Until the entry of France into this market American spectacle frames were in an unusually strong position because of their recognized superiority.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Skunk.

The evening air is freighted with fragrance by the pound, and people cry, elated, "There is a skunk around;" reminding all the voters of Araby the blest, and stirring up the quoters of Shakespeare and the rest. It discounts all the roses in both the hemispheres; the people hold their noses, they're breathing through their ears. Most scents are evanescent, they fade out in an hour, the solid and liquescent are lacking strength and power, but when the skunk is blasting with scent the eager earth, we know that it is lasting, we get our money's worth. The skunk will shyly wander along its midnight trail, and nine miles over yonder the perfume will prevail. The dope of the perfumer, sold in the druggist's stall, is but a ghost, a rumor, it lasts no time at all. We make an ample payment for some imported scent, and squirt it on our raiment, and lo, it's gone and spent. But when the skunk is goaded amid the midnight gloom, the air for days is loaded, with priceless, rich perfume. The skunk's a lovely creature, with stripes of black and white, with grace in every feature, its movements a delight. And strangers who behold it, not knowing all its charms, might say, "We would enfold it within our loving arms." But they'd be disenchanted, full soon, and filled with wrath, they'd have their clothing planted, and go to take a bath.

Relief Cash Demand Cut In New Bill By President

$1,322,000,000 Total Set for Supplemental Appropriations.

PWA Cost Placed At $500,000,000

House's Road-Building Fund Believed to Be Safe.

Intent on maintaining the same "emergency" budget set out at the first of this year, President Roosevelt early next week will ask Congress to approve a supplemental appropriations bill for $1,322,000,000.

This was announced after a Cabinet meeting yesterday, with an explanation by the President that the original $1,500,000,000 had been whittled down to take care of unanticipated appropriations by Congress.

Included in the general recovery fund will be provisions for the Civilian Conservation Corps and the Public Works Administration, with the latter scheduled to get at least $500,000,000, it is understood.

Other Amounts Not Disclosed.

The remainder will go to other agencies of the New Deal, in a manner so far undisclosed. Mr. Roosevelt did not "break down" the lump sum, which will form one of his last requests of Congress this session.

Hence, what effect the House's approval yesterday of a $460,000,000 fund for road building will have on his budget was undetermined. It was understood, however, that some such figure for this purpose was allowed for in arriving at the $1,322,000,000.

Added appropriations by Congress which caused the President to revise his emergency figures include $228,000,000 for veterans' benefits and pay restorations, $40,000,000 for crop production loans, $40,000,000 for farm mortgages, $29,000,000 for Mississippi flood control, $22,000,000 for additional veterans' benefits and $5,000,000 for the Army Air Corps.

$3,166,000,000 Wanted.

In his budget message to Congress last January, Mr. Roosevelt set forth $3,166,000,000 as the requirement for emergency needs to the end of this fiscal year, July 1, and the whole of next year. Soon after he asked and obtained $950,000,000 for the CWA and the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

This left $2,216,00,000 still available, under his budgetary plans, to carry on the New Deal alphabet through another year, after which he hopes the Administration can return to a strictly balanced budget. Subtracting from this sum the approximately $364,000,000 extra appropriations voted by Congress, a margin of $1,852,000,000 remains.

The difference between the $1,322,000,000 the President is prepared to seek and this latter sum has not been accounted for, but it was assumed it might well include the road building program initiated by the House, as well as other miscellaneous expenditures.

Davis Convicte In Montgomery

Former Takoma Park Aid Found Guilty of Embezzlement.

Bryan Davis was convicted by a Montgomery County Circuit Court jury last night of embezzling funds while town clerk and treasurer of Takoma Park from 1927 to 1932. He was accused of misappropriating more than $12,000.

Upon hearing the decision at 8:30 p. m., after the jury had been out 3 hours and 40 minutes, Judge Arthur Willard fixed bond at $7,500. The father, Benjamin G. Davis, Montgomery County commissioner and former secretary to William Jennings Bryan, posted bond.

Defense Attorneys F. Bernard Welsh and J. Bond Smith said they would file motion for new trial today. The motion is expected to be argued Tuesday or Wednesday.

The jury left the courtroom after impassioned pleas by State's Attorney Stedman Prescott that they convict Davis as a deterrent to other men entrusted with public money, and by Defense Attorneys F. Barnard Welsh and J. Bond Smith that they release Davis, whose only crime, they said, was "poor bookkeeping."

Testimony was completed Thursday. Yesterday was devoted to arguments. Each side was limited to three hours.

Judge Arthur D. Willard instructed the jury simply to return a verdict of either guilty or not guilty. A jury in Maryland is judge of the law as well as of facts, and is not instructed furthermore by the court.

Jockey Mergler Slugs Wife, Commits Suicide

4 Children Sleep Near as Father Wields Pipe, Shotgun.

Charles Mergler, a steeplechase jockey who once rode for Mrs. John Hay (Jock) Whitney, was found shot to death beside his unconscious wife yesterday in their home at Warrenton, Va.

Police believe Mergler beat his wife, Mrs. Gertrude King Mergler, with a 3-foot iron pipe and then killed himself. Their four small children were sleeping in another room when the tragedy occurred. Mrs. Mergler is in a critical condition, but is expected to survive.

The groans of Mrs. Mergler led to the discovery of the crime. Across the street, her sister, Mrs. Betty Fletcher, detected the sounds of agony. Aware that the couple had quarreled violently the day before, Mrs. Fletcher hurried over to the Mergler home, and when she was unable to enter, called police and also Coroner George Davis.

When entrance was gained, Mergler was found on his bed, with his wife on the floor beneath. The jockey apparently had attached a wire to the trigger of a shotgun, propped it up on pillows at the foot of the bed, and yanked the wire. The load of shot hit his left side, around the heart.

CHARLES MERGLER.

Mrs. Mergler was hurried to Fauquier County Hospital, where it was said she may recover.

The jockey, who was 38, had been well known both as a steeplechase rider and a flat racer. He was a member of a racing family, with

Shake-up Due As Ineligibles Grab Relief

5,000 Undeserving Found on Rolls; Condition Angers Allen.

A drastic reorganization of the District Emergency Relief Administration was threatened yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen after he heard Federal investigators had reported there are from 3,500 to 5,000 ineligibles receiving aid.

Angered by the disclosure by Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Allen pounded his desk and said: "If this is so, there is going to be a clean-out at the Emergency Relief. And when I say drastic reorganization, I mean drastic!"

"Who's fault is it that there are so many ineligibles on the rolls?" he was asked.

"It is my fault; but someone else is going to do some worrying," he replied. "I am at fault because Emergency Relief is my province and I am going to see that it is properly administered."

The presence of so many ineligibles was attributed by Leroy A. Halbert, director of Emergency Relief, to the fact that until six weeks ago there were insufficient workers to thoroughly investigate all applications.

That Allen is determined there will bea prompt shift in relief administration was indicated by orders to be issued today to Elwood Street, new director of the Board of Public Welfare, to begin immediately on a study of its organization.

Disclosure of the number of persons who are receiving relief checks who are not entitled to them was made by Hopkins as a result of an investigation by his agents. If these are dropped from the rolls it will mean a monthly saving of from $75,000 to $125,000, it was asserted.

Allen has consistently said that it

Widow of Tie Death Victim Held in Probe

Evidence of Struggle Seen in Basement of Home.

Strangled by a necktie in which his wife's fingers were entwined so tightly as to make them black, the body of Samuel L. Lytle, 42-year-old plumber and dance hall proprietor, was found yesterday in the cellar of their home in the 1300 block of Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Sobbing hysterically, Mrs. Elizabeth Byrd Lytle, 38, told police of having been led to the cellar and thrown to the floor. Unable, she said, to make her husband release her, she screamed and beat on the coal bin with her free hand.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Odell, next door neighbors, were attracted and entered the house with police.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered the body removed to the Morgue, although police expressed belief Lytle had died after a struggle. The post-mortem revealed, Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy reported, he had died of asphyxia induced by strangulation. Mrs. Lytle, whom police said was intoxicated, was arrested and held for investigation.

Evidence of Struggle.

Smashed bottles and a pencil sharpener wrenched from screws in Lytle's basement office were evidence of a struggle, police said. Neighbors and a brother of the dead man, William H. Lytle, of the 1200 block of C street northeast, informed police the couple frequently had quarreled.

She denied either she or her husband had been drinking anything other than beer, and maintained death was accidental. Police said there were indications he had been drinking, too.

Her hand pinned under her husband's body, she moaned upon the arrival of police, "Make him turn me loose." Police slashed the tie.

Lytle was found lying face down 3 feet from the furnace and his wife sitting on his back. A butcher knife, which showed no signs of having been used, was found on a nearby box. An iron poker also was near

Peanut Peddler Lodges a Big Kick Against the White House

The peanut vending of Steve Vasilakos, who has distributed goobers at the White House corner for 29 years, was called into question again yesterday.

Steve was described as the recipient of special favors and a violator of the law by a rival vendor who protested to Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee that peanut selling should be permitted on Sunday.

The restriction against such selling, according to Mrs. Norton's correspondent, James E. Winslow, of 419 Sixth street northwest, "is the worst form of discrimination, since it is directed against poor men who find it impossible to secure suitable employment."

"Here in the District," he went on, "where every form of business and amusements are carried on on Sunday, it is an outrage for police to be continually arresting vendors for selling on Sunday."

"We who happen to be Americans seem to have a disadvantage," said Winslow. "Let me call your attention to the Greek who sells peanuts in front of the White House. He violates all the police regulations, for which violations I frequently have been arrested. He sells on Sunday and is never molested by the police."

Winslow declared he could earn $4 or $5 on Sunday, as opposed to $1 to $1.50 a day during the week, which had forced him to appeal for charity last winter.

"I do not want charity," he said.

His letter was forwarded to Police Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen. If he prevails against Steve Vasilakos, he is a better man than the Washington Chamber of Commerce, which tried to move Steve from East Executive and Pennsylvania avenues for obstructing traffic. Both the President and Mrs. Roosevelt intervened, with the result that the Vasilakos roaster still toots.

President Wilson played the same role of rescuer for Vasilakos once. President Coolidge was one of Steve's best customers. But Steve regards Senator McAdoo as his closest intimate among the great, and when danger threatens it is to Senator McAdoo that he appeals.

NRA Report To Be Bared By Johnson

Darrow Board Launches Labor Study of All 420 Codes.

Bitter denial of charges that the Darrow board report on NRA had been "submerged" was offered yesterday by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson as he made known he would reply to the review board's blast at the same time the report is made public next week.

The recovery chieftain's plans were disclosed shortly after it was learned authoritatively that the Darrow board has begun a special study to determine whether labor has been discriminated against under any of the 420 NRA codes.

A broad inquiry into the effect of the recovery program on the workingman, it became known, probably would be the basis of a new report by the celebrated Chicago lawyer, Clarence Darrow, and his fellow board members. So far, the labor question has received little attention from the board.

Johnson ridiculed protests emanating from Capitol Hill that the Administration sought to minimize the importance of the report by referring it to the NRA, the Attorney General and the Federal Trade Commission for study instead of publishing the document.

Report Called Ex Parte.

"It was an ex parte report," Johnson declared, "which I have a perfect right to answer at the same time it is made public. The President has accorded me that right.

"There was no idea whatever of submerging that report and no one ever entered into anything with more good faith than I did in the creation of that board. Whatever blame there may be I take upon myself, because I asked for it."

He made it plain he demanded to look at the Darrow report because he felt he had "a right to answer it." For aid in preparing his reply, he added, he sent the report to NRA division administrators in charge of codes under fire.

Says He Was "On Spot."

Asked for comment on informal complaint of Darrow board members that they failed to receive any cooperation from the NRA, Johnson responded:

"I was on the spot there. If anybody was to call on anybody for anything it was up to them to call on me. They didn't do it. They, of course, can have anything we have."

The administrator insisted his attitude toward the review board had always been friendly. He recalled that when Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, originally suggested creation of the Darrow agency, he indorsed the plan as "a great idea."

Nye commented that if the Administration "had wished to make a best-seller out of the Darrow re-

A man standing nearby with no implement handy was powerless. The dog rushed in and after drawing blood from the bull's flanks, seized it by the nose. Harried by the dog, the bull turned to attack it. Lindsey, seriously injured, managed to drag himself to safety. The dog eluded the bull.

Dust Storm Blots Light From City

Grit Mantles Capital, Seeps in Homes; More Feared.

A thick cloud of dust, swirling at a high altitude from the sun-parched wheat fields of the West, hung over Washington yesterday, obscuring the sun. Some of it settled, covering the city with a thin, gritty layer.

According to the Weather Bureau, it was the worst duststorm ever recorded. From the Mississippi to the Atlantic and from Washington into Canada, the thick haze of dust hung in the air, darkening the sky and hampering aviation.

The storm was moving rapidly eastward and by today was expected to be over the Atlantic. The storm caused no damage here except to the results of spring house cleaning and an uncomfortable feeling in the eyes and throats of residents.

The Weather Bureau said that except for the dust the sky would have been clear, explaining that the clouds contained no water vapor but only billions of minute particles of Western top soil.

New York in "Fog."

At New York, the Associated Press reported, the tops of skyscrapers were obscured and visibility was limited. In Washington, the Tidal Basin was barely visible from the top of 13-story National Press Building, and the top of the Washington Monument penetrated a yellow, low-hung cloud.

According to Weather Bureau calculation, each cubic foot of air in Washington contained 9,450 particles of dust, about 9,000 more than normal. A square mile of atmosphere one foot thick, according to the bureau's reckoning, contained about 1,320,000,000,000 particles.

In Chicago, the Associated Press said, it was estimated that the air over the city was filled with 12,000,000 pounds of grit.

The United States Public Health Service was studying the storm, taking samples of the atmosphere here and in 13 other cities to determine exactly the density, the nature of the dust particles and their bacteriological content.

Another Storm in Sight.

It was said there might be another similar storm at any time unless rain soaks the parched soil of the Mississippi Valley, soil from which the crops have been almost completely burned by lack of rain and extremely high temperatures.

The Associated Press reported that light showers, the first in 28 days, had fallen in Chicago and in some other parts of the Middle West, but that they were not of even sufficient intensity to settle the dust.

Airplane service between Chicago and St. Paul was interrupted. Pilots said they had been unable to get above the cloud, and that the dust was traveling at a mile-a-minute rate.

In Wisconsin, it was reported, the storm was accompanied by strong surface winds, increasing forest fires which were sweeping some parts of the State.

One Man Freed In Dillinger Flight

Finger Print Expert Wins Acquittal, 2d Charged.

Crown Point, Ind., May 11 (AP).—Ernest Blunk, one of the two men accused of aiding John Dillinger to escape from the Crown Point Jail, was acquitted today.

Judge Maurice Crites, who heard the trial without a jury, decided the State's evidence was insufficient to support the charge that Blunk, fingerprint expert, willfully and feloniously aided Dillinger.

Sam Cahoon, a trusty who had the job of jail turnkey, was indicted with Blunk. His trial date has not been set.

Wheat Crop's Estimate Cut Again as Drought Continues Ruin in West

Million Each Day Is Cost of Drought

Benefits From U.S. May Be Only Hope of Some Growers.

Continuance of the worst drought the West has experienced in decades yesterday caused officials of the Agricultural Department to clip another 19,500,000 bushels from the estimated winter wheat crop, and extend until May 16 the deadline for crop reduction agreements.

With another week granted to allow more farmers to participate, the benefit payment in many cases assumed the nature of "crop insurance" for wheat growers who, ironically, are asked to cut crops in the face of a drought that threatens to destroy what they do attempt to raise.

As thousands of tons of Western farm soil floated murkily overhead, President Roosevelt canvassed what rapidly was becoming a critical situation in the wheat-producing States with members of his Cabinet, Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins scanned reports.

Million Bushels Lost Daily.

Yesterday's cut in the May 1 crop estimate reduced it from 461,471,000 to 441,900,000 bushels. More than 1,000,000 bushels a day have been lost for a month by a drought which continued yesterday, with only scattered, local showers forecast for today.

The Weather Bureau predicted showers for Nebraska, Kansas, the Dakotas and parts of Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri. The rest of the drought area apparently will wither under the same cloudless sky for another day, it was said.

Nebraska—2.43 inches, driest since 1926.

Minnesota—2.55 inches, driest in history.

Indiana—6.84 inches, driest since 1889.

How Farmers May Benefit.

Extension of the AAA crop-reduction program to next week was announced at Urbana, Ill., by George E. Farrell, chief of the AAA wheat section. He explained the benefit payments would serve a secondary purpose by insuring growers against at least part of their impending loss.

Since benefit payments to participating farmers are computed on average production in the past, growers will get money for a

New York, May 11 (AP).—A battle by emergency inhalator squads to save 6-month-old twin boys from succumbing to pneumonia was only half successful.

Roy Barry, one of the twins, died early today at his parents' home in Brooklyn—on the first anniversary of the death of his twin sisters. They, too, died of pneumonia.

Ross Barry, who with his brother had received inhalator treatment for 40 hours by police and other volunteers, had a good chance of recovery, his physician said.

Neighbors prayed throughout the night in front of the apartment house in which the Barrys live. Inside Roy lay under a rudely contrived oxygen tent, a makeshift arranged by the doctor and a nurse.

A little after midnight the watchers gave up hope, and several hours later the boy died.

Pennsylvania Primary Stirs Rum Charges

By Raymond Clapper.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 11.—The liquor issue is back in Pennsylvania politics in the first primary election since repeal.

Talk about the alleged use of liquor money in the hot primary contest is circulating underground. But as the campaign nears the finish line the question is coming nearer to the surface and is beginning to appear in veiled form in speeches of the candidates. There were indications tonight that more might be heard on the subject of campaign expenses before the voting on Tuesday.

The liquor issue was tossed directly into the 16-candidate race for the Republican nomination for Governor this week by Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon. In a campaign speech he declared the "fight of the people against the bosses and the New York liquor interests will be fought to a decision."

Mr. Shannon himself is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. He refused to expand on his charge that New York liquor interests were taking a hand in the Pennsylvania fight, and declined to indicate the candidate supposed to benefit by the alleged alliance.

Won't Name Names.

"You can draw your own conclusions," he said, when questioned immediately after making his charge. "I am not naming anybody. I have gone through this campaign so far without indulging in personalities and I am not going to begin now."

The next day, Robert Dechert, campaign manager for Attorney General William A. Schnader, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, declared the liquor charge was false. He invited any one to inspect the list of contributors to the Schnader campaign fund. He said the report was based on false and malicious gossip.

It has come to him previously, Dechert said, through anonymous typewritten letters, and in oral form, usually with $25,000 as the amount of the subscription and two New York liquor firms named. He said he had studied the campaign subscription list of his candidate

Door Is Open To Substantial Debt Offers

By Kendall Foss.

The only possible way debtor nations may avoid incurring the dreaded stigma of "defaulter" is to offer a substantial portion of the sum due on the war debt accounts next June 15.

This was made clear yesterday after President Roosevelt said he was still unalterably opposed to a general discussion, but would listen at any time to any proposition a debtor nation cared to make. With this went the fact that State Department officials have been advising diplomatic representatives of debtor countries that token payments would risk a fight with Congress on them from the penalties of the Johnson act.

Tokens being no longer enough and full payment being out of the realm of likelihood, there remains an off-chance the President might seek Congressional authority to exempt nations from default whose offers approximate their "capacity to pay."

President to Hold Fire.

At the same time it appeared unlikely last night that the President woul risk a fight with Congress on the debt issue. Energy and ammunition, it seemed, would be saved for more pressing domestic matters.

With the possible exception of Great Britain it is not expected any debtor will trouble to offer a token payment unless assured this will enable it to avoid penalties of the Johnson act. By prescribing punishment for anyone dealing in the securities of a nation in default, the act effectually cuts off such nations from future American credits.

Britain may make a token payment of modest dimensions, experts suggested yesterday, even though she knows this will not spare her the charge of "defaulter." Certain indications from London seemed to show a growing desire to preserve her legal position by paying something on account, pending a new and supportable revision of the whole question.

Afraid of Bad Example.

This is attributed to the fact Britain has many more debtors than she has creditors. She wouldn't, it

Nazi Police Rout Ministers Fighting Hitler Church Rule

Berlin, May 11 (U.P.).—Germany's church controversy broke into violence tonight when police were called into action to disperse a demonstration of opposition pastors fighting unification of Protestant denominations under Nazi rule.

Police were called to break up the meeting held under the auspices of the Free Evangelical Synod in the Kurmak district of the Province of Bradenburg.

They dispersed the angry pastors on the grounds that one of the speakers declared "there is no justice in the present Protestant Church."

U. S. Murder Warrant Out

New York, May 11 (AP).—Gen. Alberto Herrera, President of Cuba for a day after Gerardo Machado's flight, was accused of murder in a warrant issued today by the United States commissioner's office.

Gen. Herrera, white-haired veteran of Cuba's fight for independence, was missing tonight, as was Machado, his former chief, for whom a warrant charging murder and embezzlement was issued April 25.

The arrest was asked by Pablo Suarez, Cuban consul general here, who applied for the warrant. A city-wide search was begun immediately by United States Marshal Raymond J. Mulligan, in whose hands it was placed for service.

Milo A. Borges, attorney for the Cuban government in New York, who accompanied Consul Suarez to Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter's office, said he believed Gen. Herrera still is in the city.

Gen. Herrera was chief of staff, then minister of war in Machado's cabinet, and was the only secretary whose resignation the president had not accepted when he fled Cuba last August after riots in Havana.

It was presumed the warrant for Gen. Herrera's arrest was based on the allegation that he plotted with Machado and others to have police fire into mobs celebrating a false report that Machado had resigned.
